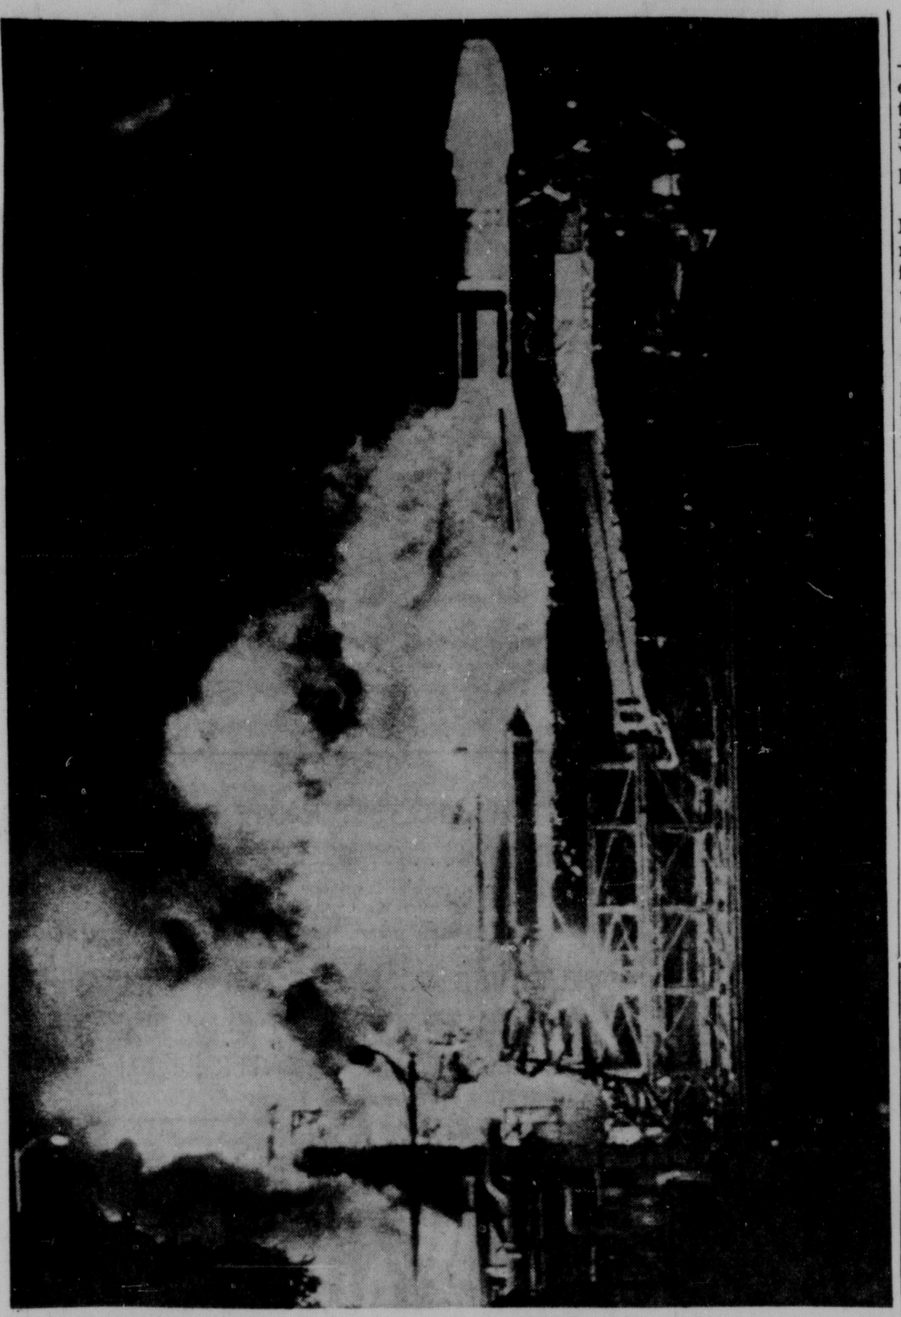
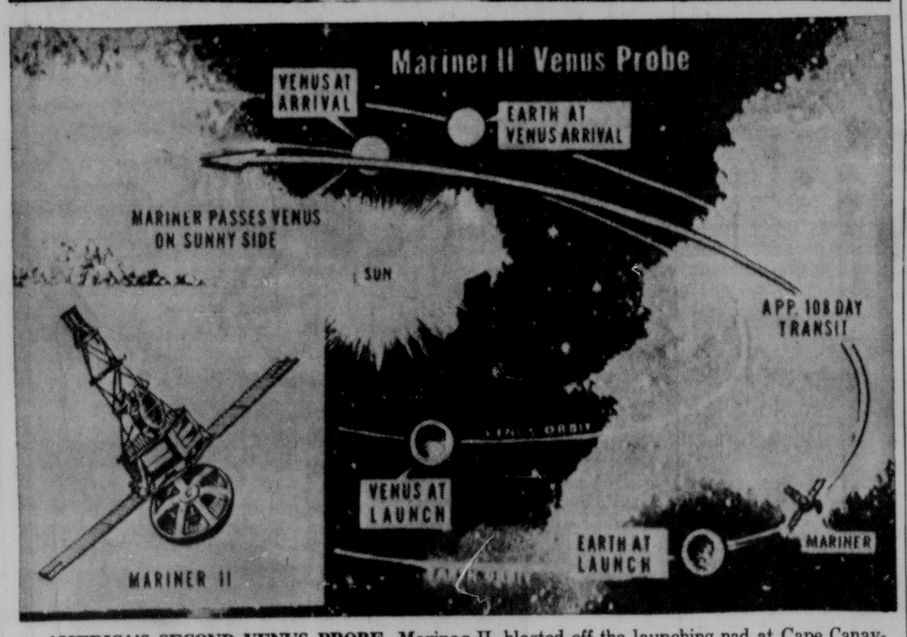
Venus Probe Drifts; Correction Slated





AMERICA'S SECOND VENUS PROBE, Mariner II, blasted off the launching pad at Cape Canaveral early today on a 181-million mile journey desi gned to reach the earth's nearest planet in four months. Below is an artist's drawing of the plann ed course of the space vehicle which is equipped with electronic sensors to determine what lies ben eath the baffling blanket of clouds around Venus. By HOWARD BENEDICT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —A Mariner 2 spacecraft rocketed into space today and scientists reported there is a possibility it will pass near the planet Venus as planned despite an early trajectory error.

If the early line is followed the Mariner will miss the planet by more than 600,000 miles, but an effort will be made by remote control steering to put it back on course.

The key to jockeying Mariner 2 back onto its proper path is a 50-pound thrust motor which is to be fired by ground signal eight days after launching when the spacecraft is more than a million miles away from earth.

By then scientists will have calculated the vehicle's path velocity precisely and will know just how long to fire the small motor to straighten out the course.

Mariner 2 blasted away from Cape Canaveral at 1:53 a.m. atop a powerful Atlas-Agena B rocket. Half an hour later the rocket injected the spacecraft on an interplanetary trajectory.

The exact reason for the spacecraft being off course in its early stages was not immediately known. But officials suspected that an abnormal rolling motion in the first stage Atlas rocket might have affected its trajectory. The rolling motion occurred for about 50 seconds of the five-minute Atlas flight.

A statement released by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration five hours after the launch said:

"Early tracking data from Mariner 2 indicates that the spacecraft will pass Venus by not more than 600,000 miles sometime in the second week in December. Because of incomplete early tracking data it is not now possible to refine this figure to a great accuracy.

"However, the midcourse motor on Mariner 2 may be capable of correcting this mis-distance to bring the spacecraft considerably closer to Venus."

Although Mariner 2 was released into space at a speed of 25,500 miles an hour, it gradually began to slow down as planned for the long haul on the 109-day, 180-million mile journey that is supposed to take it within 10,000 miles of the sunlit side of Venus Dec. 14.

Jack James, Mariner project manager for NASA's jet propulsion laboratory, said rolling might have damaged other instruments in the spacecraft which might affect its operation in the coming weeks.

"The spacecraft was not designed for severe buffeting," he said.

"We probably won't know until Dec. 14 whether the mission is a complete success."

Shortly after the 447-pound payload was carried aloft NASA officials said both stages of the Atlas-Agena rocket appeared to have fired properly.

An hour after the 10-story tall rocket and spacecraft lifted off, the tracking station at Woomera, Australia, picked up its signals and confirmed that its 16½-foot span solar panels had unfolded properly. The panels collect the sun's rays and convert them to energy to run the spacecraft's batteries.

If Mariner 2 works as planned it will race within 10,000 miles of Venus next Dec. 14 and its instruments will take the first close-up look at secrets which the bright planet conceals beneath a perpetual blanket of surrounding clouds.

It could help solve one of the most puzzling mysteries of the solar system: Can life as we know it exist on Venus? Most scientists doubt that life exists there because of steaming temperatures near the surface.

Even though the early stages of flight were successful, the gold-and-silver-coated spacecraft has many hurdles to clear—such as temperature variations and radiation effects — as it zips along through the dangerous unknowns of space.

Another big question mark was how well it would send back information across great distances. America's Pioneer V sun satellite now holds the record, having beeped back signals from 22.5 million miles in space.

If Mariner 2 does not succeed, the United States must wait until 1964 before Venus again is in a favorable position for a launching.

The first American Venus shot, Mariner 1, failed last July 22 when a faulty guidance equation

Chaos Hits Algeria In Officers Bid

Leftist Troops Eye Control Of Country, Block Election Plan

ALGIERS (AP) — A group of young guerrilla officers proclaiming leftist, anti-Western views sought today to impose their will on Algeria.

The officers lead some 20,000 unruly troops of the guerrilla Wilaya (zone) No. 4 occupying Algiers and the surrouding area.

The guerrillas' physical control of the capital gave them power and influence far beyond their relative strength. They paralyzed Deputy Premier Ahmed Ben Bella's Political Bureau and forced it Saturday to abandon its powers as the provisional government only three weeks after taking office.

The bureau's withdrawal brought new chaos to the infant nation. Ben Bella flew to Oran, in western Algeria, where he felt sure of the loyalty of the Guerrillas of Wilaya No. 5.

The guerrilla warlords were more than ever in unchallenged control of their areas. Progress toward a centralized government was once more brought to a standstill.

The election of a Constituent Assembly scheduled Sept. 2 was

West Offers 2 New Bids For Treaty

U.S., Britain Urge New Partial Ban At Geneva Conference

GENEVA (AP)—Britain and the United States today proposed a treaty for an unpoliced ban on nuclear tests in the atmosphere, under water and in outer space —and the Soviet Union immediately turned a cold shoulder on the idea.

The Western powers proposed to continue working for a treaty to ban tests in all environments — but with provisions for international on-site inspection of suspicious tremors which might indicate underground tests.

Less than two hours after the West offered the partial ban at the 17-nation disarmament conference, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vasily V. Kuznetsov turned thumbs down.

Kuznetsov told the meeting he would study the Western draft treaty for a partial ban excluding underground tests. But his subsequent remarks left no doubt his government would reject it.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur H. Dean presented the Western proposal at the 7th session of the 17-nation disarmament conference.

Dean also put before the conference a second British-American draft treaty to ban tests in all environments for all time.

Dean said that this draft includes ideas expressed by the

Rescue Efforts Fail

Blaze Claims 6 Children In New California Home

CLOVIS, Calif. (AP) — The six children of Ben and Betty Funk died in a fire that destroyed their new home in this Fresno suburb Sunday despite valiant rescue tries by the father and neighbors.

One teen-age neighbor smashed through a window into the blazing home and, with hands slashed by broken glass, handed out four of the children. But they apparently were dead at the time.

The father and others broke more windows in desperate rescue attempts but were turned back by intense heat.

Fire Chief W. E. Riley said afterward the window smashing may have worsened the situation. "It let in wind drafts," he said.

The dead children were: Dennis, 9; Howard, 8; Charlotte, 7; Shirley, 6; John, 3, and Deborah, 21 months. Deputy Coroner Walter Sechler said all had suffocated.

Authorities said cause of the fire was not immediately apparent and may not be learned for several days, pending check of the ashes.

Funk, 32, a cabinet maker, was awakened by his wife, 28, at about 1:30 a.m. Sunday with a cry of "fire.' "

He broke a window of their bedroom and tumbled outside, cut by glass fragments. Then Funk and his brother, Leonard, 20, who had been sleeping in the back yard, pulled Mrs. Funk through the window.

Her leg was broken when it became entangled between frame and sill.

Russell Welch, 19, who lives two houses away, heard screams of alarm, ran to help and battered in through a window.

Fire Destroys Straw After Truck Crashes

WEST POINT — Load lines on a truckload of straw broke Saturday afternoon on Route 518 near Gavers, dumping the bales on a lighted flare pot at a detour.

The blaze consumed 107 bales of straw and destroyed the 1949 truck owned by John Shaffer of Salem R.D. 2. He set his loss at $450, uninsured.

Fire Chief Jack Plunkett of the West Point volunteer fire department said 10 men responded to the alarm at 2:35, but found the blaze beyond control. Neighbors tried to pull the truck clear with a tractor, but the heat drove them back.

Liquor Store Will Move To New Location

Harry Excell, manager, announced today the Ohio State Liquor Store will move this week from the old quarters on Walnut St. to the new store at the Bus Terminal on E. 5th St. New hours have been adopted.

He said the store will be closed all day Thursday and Friday to move the stock to the new quarters. The store will be open at the regular time of 11 a.m. Saturday at the new location.

New hours have been scheduled for the store after the move is made, Excell announced.

He said the store will be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays and from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursdays and Saturdays.

The store will be closed next Monday for the Labor Day holiday, Excell pointed out the Wellsville store will be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days the local store is closed.

The new quarters will be one of the most modern stores in the state, he said. But, he pointed out, it will not be a self-service store as many believe.

He said the new store provides 3,000 square feet of space. It measures 25-x-120 feet.

The old ramp at the terminal was coverted for the store. The roof was utilized and both sides were blocked in. A brick entrance was added. Excell said there are two entrances.

U.S. Blames Russia For Berlin Riots

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States, in a note today, held the Soviet Union responsible for shootings and disorders along the Berlin wall and again invited it to a four-power conference to deal with the problem.

The note, delivered to the Foreign Office today, replied to a Soviet note to the United States Friday which protested stoning of Soviet troop buses in West Berlin and warning that "necessary measures" would be taken.

"The U.S. government understands the concern of the Soviet government about the stone throwing at Soviet personnel," the American note said, "but the Soviet government cannot expect to escape censure for, or to avoid the consequences of, permitting brutalities to occur in the sector of the city for which it is responsible."

The note cited what it called the "wanton provocations" in the Eastern sector.

"It should not be necessary to remind the Soviet government," it said, "that the present tensions in Berlin have been caused by the illegal erection of the wall and the senseless cruelty of the police of the Soviet sector."

U.S. Probes Illegality Of Havana Raid

Shelling May Have Violated Neutrality Law Of This Nation

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government pressed an investigation today to determine if the shelling of Havana violated the U.S. Neutrality Act.

The State Department already has pinned on a Miami-based exiled Cuban students group the responsibility for Friday night's attack, but has not said whether the raiders sailed from this country.

The neutrality law prohibits launching from U.S. soil armed attacks on countries not at war with the United States. The Justice Department is trying to find out if prosecutions under this law are called for.

In a Miami news conference Sunday, Juan Manuel Salvat, leader of the students group, declined to say where the ships used in the off-shore shelling of Miramar suburb were based. But, he declared, "I don't feel we have violated any law of any country."

Pair Foiled In Ohio Pen Escape Try

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Two Ohio Penitentiary prisoners were foiled in an escape try early today—scarcely an hour after a trusty who ran off Sunday was returned to the institution.

Warden Ernie Maxwell relates the story:

At 1:45 a.m., a convict accosted a guard who had just made a security check of his dormitory, brandished a pair of scissors and overpowered him. The inmate was George Miles, 49. The guard was Clarence Hodges, who had been on the job only since July 23.

Robert Jim Charles Ford, 23, then joined Miles, and the pair bound Hodges and left him in the dormitory. Under cover of considerable fog, Miles and Ford proceeded to a new building under construction along the west wall of the prison.

They got atop the steelwork, only to be spotted by guard Nelson Sager—another rookie, on the staff just since April 2—and were apprehended without a fight.

Ford and Miles face disciplinary action, Maxwell said.

Their attempt to break out followed the return inside the walls

Rush Begins On Final Bills In Congress

House Crowds 22 Measures On Slate For Today's Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heading into what they hope will be the final month of the session, the Senate and House buckle down today to a full week of work.

Twenty-two bills, several of them highly controversial, were crowded onto today's House calendar, to be followed Tuesday by consideration of a $500-million public works bill.

The Senate's week probably will be taken up with an unexpected fight over a House-passed tax revision bill stripped of many administration proposals by the Senate Finance Committee.

Top attraction on the House docket is a proposal to eliminate payment of poll taxes as a qualification for voting in elections involving federal office. It is one of 13 bills slated to be called up today under a procedure requiring a two-thirds vote for passage.

Storm Soaks Area's Fields

Wind Accompanies Rain's Beginning

Over a half-inch of badly-needed rain fell in the East Liverpool area in a storm that started Sunday night and continued until after dawn today.

High winds accompanied the outset of the storm, but no damage was reported. The rain lashed the area briefly, driven by the strong wind, and then settled down to a steady shower.

The rain continued intermittently through the night and resumed about dawn today.

The Stratton Dam measured 0.58-inch of rain, enough to help parched crops and lawns in the area.

The Stratton Dam registered an overnight low of 71. The low this morning in downtown East Liverpool was 66.

This afternoon will be mostly sunny, with a high of 78 to 84, the Ohio weatherman said.

It will be clear and cool tonight, with a low of 58-64. Tuesday will be sunny and warmer.

Large Crowd Attends County Fair's Closing

LISBON — Favored by perfect weather, Columbiana County's 117th annual fair ended Saturday with good attendance for an afternoon of harness racing and a grandstand variety show at night.

President William Maple of Kensington said the board was well pleased with public response to the annual exposition, which began Tuesday.

Secretary J. Richard Stamp of Salem R. D. 2 said attendance figures will be available Thursday. The board will meet Wednesday evening at the secretary's office on the grounds. He said he believes gate receipts will be above those for 1961.

Interior Of Garage Hit By Flames At Guilford

LISBON —Fire of undetermined origin burned out the inside of Dick's Garage on Route 172 at Guilford Lake at 3 a. m. today.

Owned by James Jewell of Guilford, the garage is next door to the Guilford volunteer fire department station. Chief Roy Guthrie and his men fought the blaze in the rain for 2½ hours before bringing it under control.

An unidentified motorist discovered the fire and wakened neighbors. Firemen removed several cars parked close to the garage outside. There were no cars inside. Firemen said several motors and much of Jewell's equipment were destroyed.

St. Clair Ave.—Now Or Never?

The fate of the $400,000 improvement to St. Clair Ave. rests in the lap of City Council.

It is one of the most critical decisions that has faced any Council in recent years. Hole-plagued St. Clair has been, and is, a disgrace.

The proposed program has been argued pro and con, with open protests coming from a small percentage of those whose property fronts on the section of the thoroughfare scheduled to be improved.

Ninety - nine property owners between Princeton Ave. and the city limits would be charged a $10-a-foot assessment under the project, or a total of approximately $140,000, based on 14,000 feet of assessable frontage. The city's share would be $80,000 to $90,000, with the federal government providing approximately 50 per cent of the total cost.

Those who appeared before Council last week voiced two major complaints — the $10-a-foot assessment is too high and a 36-foot concrete road is not necessary.

There is an immediate answer to the latter complaint. The Federal Bureau of Public Roads, after studying traffic counts, refused to participate in a roadway less than 36 feet wide. With the government furnishing 50 per cent of the money needed for the work, it is quite clear that the improvement would be doomed in a hurry if anything less than 36 feet were accepted. The city itself does not have the funds necessary to bear the work by itself.

That leaves the assessment as the one remaining point open to discussion.

The $10 figure was arrived at by Council after a comprehensive study and is considered fair in line with previous assessments here and a look at street programs in other communities.

Those residents of St. Clair who would pay the assessment must realize that they, in turn, have had the use of other city streets which have been improved at the expense of other property owners.

While it is unfortunate that a few must shoulder the assessment burden, Council should look at the St. Clair Ave. improvement with the most good to the most people in mind. And while there were protests, it must be remembered that only a small percentage of the property owners involved appeared before Council, scarcely a mass demonstration.

If the St. Clair Ave. project is allowed to go down the drain this time, it could be years before another such opportunity presents itself. With the street a sorry mess, another delay would mean that one of the city's main traffic arteries would remain an eyesore and continue to keep our neighbors out rather than invite them in.

Also lost if the proposal is rejected would be some $15,000 already spent by the city in engineering surveys.

In the interest of a better East Liverpool, it is our firm opinion that Council should see fit to go ahead with the improvement. The protests from a few are heavily outweighed by the benefits that would result to many.

Soblen And The Legalisms

If Robert A. Soblen is as close to death as his doctors have testified he is and as far from being returned to the United States as his lawyers intend to keep him, this country never will see him again. Either he will die and be interred in British soil, or long-drawn-out legal proceedings that already have used up two months will drag on enough longer to give him another chance to wriggle free and tie up the hair-splitting legalists of some other country.

The issue in the Soblen case as far as the ordinary run of public opinion in the United States is concerned is the hair-splitting legalism with which this convicted traitor is surrounded at a safe distance from the country he betrayed.

If Britain were trying to recover a convicted traitor who had shown himself willing and capable of selling out a country that had given him hospitality as an alien and the United States had him in custody, Americans would be in favor of telling its lawyers to stand aside for British jailers.

It is pleasant to recall how Adolf Eichmann, the Nazi butcher-boy, was snatched out of Argentina by a flying squadron of five Israelis before a lawyer could zip open a brief case. If Israel had asked for the prisoner, Eichmann would still be in Buenos Aires.

Perhaps this explains why Israel got rid of Soblen as soon as it discovered he was its unannounced, uninvited and unwelcome guest. It has a precedent for dealing with fugitives whose crimes are so heinous they have foregone all right of refuge.

A Statistic We Don't Believe

In a recent column on automobile seat belts, Sylvia Porter — who had just had belts installed after needlessly injuring herself in a minor accident — said "studies show that only 5 per cent of belts in cars automatically equipped with them are fastened."

This sounds like an excuse by the auto industry for not installing belts as standard equipment. If the 5 per cent can be referred to as a "statistic," we don't believe it.

Even if the percentage of use were to be something under 50, we wouldn't consider it an argument against seat belts any more than we would consider the failure of some drivers to watch their speedometers a valid reason for not installing speedometers.

We believe no driver or passenger would fail to fasten a seat belt on a long trip. We believe, moreover, that every driver and passenger should have the option of using seat belts; that they are something the auto industry owes to its customers, just as it owes them safety glass and a margin of security in auto brakes.

Whoever made the study showing only 5 per cent use of seat belts provided without a specific request had better look again in a few years—provided the things are made standard equipment on new cars.

Progress Report

By Truman Twill

Someone was wondering about the Rottwollie pup and how things are going in that department.

About the same . . .

The ground is too hard to dig so that activity has been slowing down. Besides she was down to bed rock in most places.

When we filled the pond to make shareholders of the power company feel like life was worth investing in, she took to it like a duck. We renamed it Dog Pond, a phrase in favor in this locality. She still hasn't discovered she can swim because as soon as she gets buoyant while wading toward the deep part of the pond she reverses direction and gets out.

There was trouble with the fireflies. Each one that lit up in her range of vision was someone striking a match or using a flshlight and she had the countryside echoing with woofings.

She has taken up kitten-lugging again on a large scale because there are more kittens. It's like the rich Indian who was hitting more poor Indians in his new Cadillac because he was getting closer to the Indian reservation.

In her defense it must be said the kittens also are to blame because they like to be carried and walk back and forth in front of her mouth to draw her into a performance — awwrrr and away we go!

Last winter when she was growing up she carried away firewood and left it in out-of-the-way places. This summer — she is now 14 months old — she is finding wood in out of the way places and bringing it to the woodpile. She also is bringing tin cans, dead animals, and parts of dead animals.

Every year at this time a weed in the woods bordering the lane gives off such a foul odor that passersby pale. The children used to dread the walk to and from the end of the lane to get to the school bus. The Rottwollie found it . . .

Whether she is eating it, rolling in it, or both, is uncertain. When she gets within 20 feet the scent makes your eyes water. To touch her is enough to necessitate taking a bath. She is as pleased as if she were a debutante with a five-gallon jug of French perfume and a pump to spray it on with.

To make it worse, she has discovered the twin beds — the one that used to be occupied by the spaniel before that matriarch got too stiff in the joints to jump on it.

The other bed, of course, continues to be occupied by the Irish setter, who also has made contact with the odoriferous weed but hasn't rolled in it or eaten it. By Thanksgiving the smell will have worn off, but until then the Rottwollie will be barred from the house.

She still has a special spot in her heart for one of the rams and they look at each other through the fence. Last winter in the barn they made a big thing of licking each other's ears, which is the last step before a proposal of marriage.

When we added her to the menagerie a year ago she was a wriggling chunk of fuzz. This summer while we were away, she lost the fuzz and grow a coat of coal black hair with ginger trimming. She also has grown a set of the most formidable teeth to be found outside a crocodile.

She knows tricks. Her best one is where we tell her to lie down and she dares us to make her and we take the dare and a minute later we are stretched out flat and she is standing on us.

That's how things are going with the Rottwollie. Pup? Beast.

Odd Facts

The root system of the giant redwood trees of California is surprisingly shallow. But the roots are so widespread that one tree's roots may spread over an acre of land. The buttress formation of the base of the tree, which develops over centuries, enables it to withstand storms and winds despite the shallowness of its root system.

The shark is generally conceded to have the sharpest teeth of any animals in the world. Sharks vary in size, from the dog fishes of about three feet in length to the basking shark, which can be from 35 to 40 feet long.

Largest truck terminal in the world is not New York City, but just across the Hudson River from that metropolis. It is Newark, New Jersey, whose 50-mile hub contains more than 80 per cent of New Jersey's total population.

Not Just At The Moment, Please!

Lessons From The Humphrey Case

By Raymond Moley

There are some weighty lessons which can be derived from the utter confusion in which Sen. Stuart Symington's ill - tempered and ill-timed attack upon George Humphrey left the investigation of government stockpiles.

One is the lamentable deterioration of the Senate of the United States as a legislative and investigatory body.

Another is the deterioration in the executive branch of government which will certainly result from demagogic attacks upon experienced and able businessmen who are induced to serve in public office.

A final judgment is impossible as to whether government money was wasted in the contract between the Hanna company and the government, which concerned supplies of nickel. For the confusion which resulted from Chairman Symington's sudden adjournment of the hearings left the whole investigation in midstream.

THE COMPLETE defense of George Humphrey was not heard, nor was there any explanation by the responsible officials of the Truman Administration who made the contracts.

What Symington did, apparently to make headlines derogatory to Humphrey, was to hit and run in a summary fashion, despite the protests of other members of his committee.

Even the most casual observers of congressional affairs in the past few years have noted that, while the Senate traditionally was the legislative house held highest in public esteem and in the quality of its members and procedures, the House of Representatives has in recent years risen to the foremost place.

The Senate section of the Congressional Record is crammed with irrelevancies and windy demagoguery. Its investigations are, with a few notable exceptions, prejudiced, disorderly, and, above all, reeking with politics.

In my own job as a journalist, I now find that the record of proceedings in the House is meatier, more informative and more orderly.

THE DEBACLE in the Symington hearings illustrates this senatorial decline.

Symington himself is not a lawyer. Before he came into public life his experience was in various businesses. Hence, in running the investigation of the Hanna contracts he left most of the planning to counsel and staff.

The witnesses who were heard made big headlines deorgatory to the Hanna company and to its former head, George Humphrey.

Then, when Humphrey came well equipped with counsel, accountants and other informed people from the company, he clearly caught Symington and his staff unprepared.

Then the chairman let loose a tirade against the former treasury secretary. The members of the committee apparently had no advance notice that Symington would attempt to sum up the case before all the evidence was heard.

In a wholly arbitrary way, he refused to permit the case to go on and abruptly cut off the protests of minority members.

The strangest part of it all was that the individuals who represented the Truman administration in making the contracts were not heard from. For this was a case in which the old legal rule of caveat emptor prevailed.

If, as Symington declared, the Hanna company had the advantage in the deal for the nickel, why was this alleged waste of public money permitted?

After Senators Bush and Beall challenged the chairman on this point, the reply was that Howard I. Young, who shared that responsibility, was physically unable to appear.

But on the very next day Young gave a lengthy statement to United Press International. And so, if he was able to do this, why was Symington's counsel unable to go to St. Louis and get the statement earlier?

NOTHING showed that Humphrey as secretary of the treasury for 4½ years had used his official position to help the company of which he had been the head and in which he had stock ownership (which he revealed when he was appointed in 1953). But the import of Symington's tirade was that Humphrey was a callous profiteer.

It was the minority members, not Symington, who brought out the fact that in 1957 these Hanna contracts had been investigated by a subcommittee of which the then Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson was head.

Even more important than this clumsy abuse of the Senate's power of investigation is the effect of demagogic attacks upon that declining number of experienced business and professional people who are induced to accept public office in any administration.

Since government has sprawled so completely into all business life, it is difficult indeed to find any sizable company which has not had some dealings with it.

The able and responsible officials of such companies become less willing to risk attacks upon their integrity which visit great damage on their reputations, the companies with which they have been associated, and their families and friends.

THIS MEANS that the vast executive operations of government must be managed by people who have had no real experience in management or important professional life. This may well be why so many of the federal government's operations are so incompetent and wasteful.

In the case of George Humphrey, nothing has been shown to contradict the fact that as secretary of the treasury he was a most competent public servant who stood at all times for efficiency and economy in public business. But he has been made the victim, years later, of headlines made by this fantastic abuse of senatorial powers.

Lesson In Waiting

By James Marlow

Senate Approval Delayed For Marshall

WASHINGTON

Thurgood Marshall, the Negro lawyer who led the step-by-step fight of Negroes against segregation in America, got a lot of practice in waiting. He needed it.

Almost a year ago President Kennedy, deciding to appoint him to the federal Court of Appeals, sent his nomination to the Senate for approval. There has been no approval yet.

But the Senate whipped through in a few days with its blessing for Byron O. (Whizzer) White when Kennedy last March appointed the former All-America football star to the higher position of Supreme Court justice.

Neither the delay with Marshall nor the speed with White lay with the full Senate.

The responsibility in both cases rested with the Senate Judiciary Committee headed by James O. Eastland, Mississippi Democrat, and with another Southern Democrat, Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, head of a subcommittee.

The 54-year-old Marshall, as chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, started in 1938 to argue before the Supreme Court, in case after case, against segregation of Negroes.

He won all but three. His crowning achievement was in the Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954, outlawing segregation in public schools.

Last Sept. 23 Kennedy nominated him to the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals which handles cases from Vermont, Connecticut and New York and sent his name to the Senate. Congress quit before any action was taken. So on Oct. 23, 1961 Kennedy gave him a recess appointment.

When Congress returned this year, Kennedy sent his name to the Senate again, this time on Jan. 15.

As usual the nomination was referred to Eastland's committee where the procedure is to hold public hearings on the man's merits. After the hearings the committee votes for or against.

If the votes is against, that almost always ends it. If the committee approves, then the name goes to the full Senate for approval or the opposite.

But Eastland turned Marshall's case over to Johnston for his subcommittee to hold hearings.

The procedure here, after the subcommittee hearings, is for the full committee to vote. But Johnston stalled and held six hearings since January.

This is quite a contrast with the treatment White got. Kennedy nominated him March 30. White at the time was deputy attorney general. Before that he had been a practicing attorney.

In 1960 White, whose home is Colorado, had organized a Kennedy-for-President group and in 1961, during the presidential campaign, headed the National Volunteers for Kennedy.

White's nomination didn't go to a subcommittee. Although the full committee probably knew far less about White than it did about Marshall, a brief hearing was held April 11 and White got unanimous committee approval. That same day the full Senate approved.

Some of the Judiciary Committee members who are not on Johnston's subcommittee — like Democrats Philip A. Hart of Michigan and John A. Carroll of Colorado and Republican Kenneth B. Keating of New York — have been publicly putting the heat on Johnston to get through with the Marshall case.

Johnston decided Friday he had had enough hearings. But he hasn't decided when he'd call his subcommittee together to consider Marshall's worthiness before reporting to the full judiciary committee.

Since Congress is in a rush to quit and go home, there's a chance the full Senate won't be able to vote on Marshall this year unless there's quick action by Johnston and Eastland. Marshall's salary will be cut off if he's not confirmed before the Senate adjourns.

Through The Years

THIRTY YEARS AGO — The 31st annual reunion of the Burbick family was held at Pine Ridge Camp. Robert Burbick of Lisbon was named president.

Miss Louise Johnston and Neal Johnston of Bradshaw Ave. returned from Silver Bay, N. Y. where they attended the United Presbyterian Young People's Society national convention.

Mrs. Earl Ward was named president of the Calendar Coterie of the Wellsville Methodist Protestant Church.

TWENTY YEARS AGO — Miss Ruth Urie was in charge of the art display during the ninth annual dahlia show of the Wellsville Glad-Dahlia Club.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Weikart of Sarah St. and Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Ward of St. Clair Ave. returned from a tour of the Smoky Mountains in Tennessee.

TEN YEARS AGO — Mrs. Helen Todd of East Liverpool was named assistant secretary during the Garey family reunion at the Austin Garey home near Moundsville.

Mrs. Nora Fuller was elected vice councilor of Pride of Valley Council 4, Daughters of America.

Iowa State University weed specialists have identified the carrier for a weed popularly known as Devil's Claw. It is coming into Iowa on Colorado feeder lambs that have been grazed on wheat stubble in Kansas. The weed is not noxious, but is an added nuisance to farmers.

Higher speed limits on 100 upstate New York highways have reduced by more than half the number of motorists travelling at illegal speeds. On one road where the limit was raised from 35 to 45 miles an hour, the speed at which a majority drove actually declined.

Letters To The Editor

EDITOR OF THE REVIEW:

A study of assistance to transients and migratory families who are served in East Liverpool shows they are better cared for than many local families. This includes families who live and maintain a home in the low salary bracket, as well as applicants who seek temporary aid, and continued public assistance.

The cost of food and shelter for one night is $3.50 per individual transient. In comparison, a family of five individuals in a $75-a-week salary bracket has less than $2.50 per day per individual. It is assumed that welfare applicants are much less.

Through interviews, 60 per cent of transient applicants have said they had received aid from various private citizens and other benevolent groups and agencies in East Liverpool area, which is additional to Salvation Army aid. It is feared that if duplication of services of this nature to transients in this area continues it will encourage the growth of transient applications.

THE SALVATION ARMY in East Liverpool has a rotating file of 3,000 applicants and new ones have been added almost daily. One out of three applies for additional assistance every two years and some more often. We have 72 local resident transients in East Liverpool. A small percentage gets benefits of different kinds. The remainder are alcoholics and unempoyables.

The Salvation Army records disclose we were visited with 512 statewide resident transients who do receive some benefits and this could be supplemented in their community if they would ask for it. This would include institutional care. Many have refused this type of service. A record number of 2,348 are from surrounding states, excluding 57 aliens. There were 113 women and 212 children. The largest percentage of transients are found in the 40 and 50 age group.

From the 3,000 applicants, we recorded 1,214 men who claimed alcohol was their problem; 1,104 said they used alcohol, but it is only a minor problem; the remainder of the 3,000 made no commitments; 1,942 had no educational background; approximately 2,500 were considered unemployables because of age, alcoholism, and educational and other handicaps; 1,731 made no religious commitments.

It is noted in our interviews with migrators that many take advantage of services by charitable organizations for pleasure trips. It is also noted that families who returned from vacations had more money when they returned then when they started. It is especially noted that in Ohio state, places of Salvation Army services to transient people are not much more than 50 miles apart, and in many cases much less. This does not include services of other benevolent groups which are made available in the same area.

In communities where law enforcement agencies have carried heavy burdens of unsolved assault, petty larcencies and other misdemeanors, there are no reasons for suspicion that some migratory people have been a contributing factor.

Service to the migratory people is only one of the many services offered and performed by the Salvation Army in this community.

We suggest that private citizens should protect themselves and their community and their benevolent giving by being well informed as to the services rendered to this group of people. Those who work for and help migratory people should be well informed of their nature and their living habits. Proper referrals should be made to institutions which have professional services available.

Services to transients in this area appear to be many and the resources are small. It would be well for people in this community to do some serious thinking regarding this group of people. Transients in this area are better cared for than one thinks.

Corps Commander

Bonnie Banks

The bonnie bonnie banks of Loch Lomond may some day become a Scottish national park.

Scotland at present has no national parks in the American sense. England numbers only eight, though it has hundreds of parks administered locally.

Lomond has attracted increasing numbers of sightseers since the early 16th century; vacationers now are overcrowding the public recreation areas and camping sites. With the population of nearby Glasgow growing rapidly, both naturalists and citizens are calling for national protection of Great Britain's largest fresh - water lake.

Located in the southwest corner of Scotland, Loch Lomond is 24 miles long and 5 miles wide.

Last winter when she was growing up she carried away firewood and left it in out-of-the-way places. This summer — she is now 14 months old — she is finding wood in out of the way places and bringing it to the woodpile. She also is bringing tin cans, dead animals, and parts of dead animals.

Every year at this time a weed in the woods bordering the lane gives off such a foul odor that passersby pale. The children used to dread the walk to and from the end of the lane to get to the school bus. The Rottwollie found it . . .

Whether she is eating it, rolling in it, or both, is uncertain. When she gets within 20 feet the scent makes your eyes water. To touch her is enough to necessitate taking a bath. She is as pleased as if she were a debutante with a five-gallon jug of French perfume and a pump to spray it on with.

To make it worse, she has discovered the twin beds — the one that used to be occupied by the spaniel before that matriarch got too stiff in the joints to jump on it.

The other bed, of course, continues to be occupied by the Irish setter, who also has made contact with the odoriferous weed but hasn't rolled in it or eaten it. By Thanksgiving the smell will have worn off, but until then the Rottwollie will be barred from the house.

She still has a special spot in her heart for one of the rams and they look at each other through the fence. Last winter in the barn they made a big thing of licking each other's ears, which is the last step before a proposal of marriage.

When we added her to the menagerie a year ago she was a wriggling chunk of fuzz. This summer while we were away, she lost the fuzz and grow a coat of coal black hair with ginger trimming. She also has grown a set of the most formidable teeth to be found outside a crocodile.

She knows tricks. Her best one is where we tell her to lie down and she dares us to make her and we take the dare and a minute later we are stretched out flat and she is standing on us.

That's how things are going with the Rottwollie. Pup? Beast.

Odd Facts

The root system of the giant redwood trees of California is surprisingly shallow. But the roots are so widespread that one tree's roots may spread over an acre of land. The buttress formation of the base of the tree, which develops over centuries, enables it to withstand storms and winds despite the shallowness of its root system.

The shark is generally conceded to have the sharpest teeth of any animals in the world. Sharks vary in size, from the dog fishes of about three feet in length to the basking shark, which can be from 35 to 40 feet long.

Largest truck terminal in the world is not New York City, but just across the Hudson River from that metropolis. It is Newark, New Jersey, whose 50-mile hub contains more than 80 per cent of New Jersey's total population.

Lessons From The Humphrey Case

By Raymond Moley

There are some weighty lessons which can be derived from the utter confusion in which Sen. Stuart Symington's ill - tempered and ill-timed attack upon George Humphrey left the investigation of government stockpiles.

One is the lamentable deterioration of the Senate of the United States as a legislative and investigatory body.

Another is the deterioration in the executive branch of government which will certainly result from demagogic attacks upon experienced and able businessmen who are induced to serve in public office.

A final judgment is impossible as to whether government money was wasted in the contract between the Hanna company and the government, which concerned supplies of nickel. For the confusion which resulted from Chairman Symington's sudden adjournment of the hearings left the whole investigation in midstream.

THE COMPLETE defense of George Humphrey was not heard, nor was there any explanation by the responsible officials of the Truman Administration who made the contracts.

What Symington did, apparently to make headlines derogatory to Humphrey, was to hit and run in a summary fashion, despite the protests of other members of his committee.

Even the most casual observers of congressional affairs in the past few years have noted that, while the Senate traditionally was the legislative house held highest in public esteem and in the quality of its members and procedures, the House of Representatives has in recent years risen to the foremost place.

The Senate section of the Congressional Record is crammed with irrelevancies and windy demagoguery. Its investigations are, with a few notable exceptions, prejudiced, disorderly, and, above all, reeking with politics.

In my own job as a journalist, I now find that the record of proceedings in the House is meatier, more informative and more orderly.

THE DEBACLE in the Symington hearings illustrates this senatorial decline.

Symington himself is not a lawyer. Before he came into public life his experience was in various businesses. Hence, in running the investigation of the Hanna contracts he left most of the planning to counsel and staff.

The witnesses who were heard made big headlines deorgatory to the Hanna company and to its former head, George Humphrey.

Then, when Humphrey came well equipped with counsel, accountants and other informed people from the company, he clearly caught Symington and his staff unprepared.

Then the chairman let loose a tirade against the former treasury secretary. The members of the committee apparently had no advance notice that Symington would attempt to sum up the case before all the evidence was heard.

In a wholly arbitrary way, he refused to permit the case to go on and abruptly cut off the protests of minority members.

The strangest part of it all was that the individuals who represented the Truman administration in making the contracts were not heard from. For this was a case in which the old legal rule of caveat emptor prevailed.

If, as Symington declared, the Hanna company had the advantage in the deal for the nickel, why was this alleged waste of public money permitted?

After Senators Bush and Beall challenged the chairman on this point, the reply was that Howard I. Young, who shared that responsibility, was physically unable to appear.

But on the very next day Young gave a lengthy statement to United Press International. And so, if he was able to do this, why was Symington's counsel unable to go to St. Louis and get the statement earlier?

NOTHING showed that Humphrey as secretary of the treasury for 4½ years had used his official position to help the company of which he had been the head and in which he had stock ownership (which he revealed when he was appointed in 1953). But the import of Symington's tirade was that Humphrey was a callous profiteer.

It was the minority members, not Symington, who brought out the fact that in 1957 these Hanna contracts had been investigated by a subcommittee of which the then Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson was head.

Even more important than this clumsy abuse of the Senate's power of investigation is the effect of demagogic attacks upon that declining number of experienced business and professional people who are induced to accept public office in any administration.

Since government has sprawled so completely into all business life, it is difficult indeed to find any sizable company which has not had some dealings with it.

The able and responsible officials of such companies become less willing to risk attacks upon their integrity which visit great damage on their reputations, the companies with which they have been associated, and their families and friends.

THIS MEANS that the vast executive operations of government must be managed by people who have had no real experience in management or important professional life. This may well be why so many of the federal government's operations are so incompetent and wasteful.

In the case of George Humphrey, nothing has been shown to contradict the fact that as secretary of the treasury he was a most competent public servant who stood at all times for efficiency and economy in public business. But he has been made the victim, years later, of headlines made by this fantastic abuse of senatorial powers.

Lesson In Waiting

By James Marlow

Senate Approval Delayed For Marshall

WASHINGTON

Thurgood Marshall, the Negro lawyer who led the step-by-step fight of Negroes against segregation in America, got a lot of practice in waiting. He needed it.

Almost a year ago President Kennedy, deciding to appoint him to the federal Court of Appeals, sent his nomination to the Senate for approval. There has been no approval yet.

But the Senate whipped through in a few days with its blessing for Byron O. (Whizzer) White when Kennedy last March appointed the former All-America football star to the higher position of Supreme Court justice.

Neither the delay with Marshall nor the speed with White lay with the full Senate.

The responsibility in both cases rested with the Senate Judiciary Committee headed by James O. Eastland, Mississippi Democrat, and with another Southern Democrat, Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, head of a subcommittee.

The 54-year-old Marshall, as chief counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, started in 1938 to argue before the Supreme Court, in case after case, against segregation of Negroes.

He won all but three. His crowning achievement was in the Supreme Court decision of May 17, 1954, outlawing segregation in public schools.

Last Sept. 23 Kennedy nominated him to the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals which handles cases from Vermont, Connecticut and New York and sent his name to the Senate. Congress quit before any action was taken. So on Oct. 23, 1961 Kennedy gave him a recess appointment.

When Congress returned this year, Kennedy sent his name to the Senate again, this time on Jan. 15.

As usual the nomination was referred to Eastland's committee where the procedure is to hold public hearings on the man's merits. After the hearings the committee votes for or against.

If the votes is against, that almost always ends it. If the committee approves, then the name goes to the full Senate for approval or the opposite.

But Eastland turned Marshall's case over to Johnston for his subcommittee to hold hearings.

The procedure here, after the subcommittee hearings, is for the full committee to vote. But Johnston stalled and held six hearings since January.

This is quite a contrast with the treatment White got. Kennedy nominated him March 30. White at the time was deputy attorney general. Before that he had been a practicing attorney.

In 1960 White, whose home is Colorado, had organized a Kennedy-for-President group and in 1961, during the presidential campaign, headed the National Volunteers for Kennedy.

White's nomination didn't go to a subcommittee. Although the full committee probably knew far less about White than it did about Marshall, a brief hearing was held April 11 and White got unanimous committee approval. That same day the full Senate approved.

Some of the Judiciary Committee members who are not on Johnston's subcommittee — like Democrats Philip A. Hart of Michigan and John A. Carroll of Colorado and Republican Kenneth B. Keating of New York — have been publicly putting the heat on Johnston to get through with the Marshall case.

Johnston decided Friday he had had enough hearings. But he hasn't decided when he'd call his subcommittee together to consider Marshall's worthiness before reporting to the full judiciary committee.

Since Congress is in a rush to quit and go home, there's a chance the full Senate won't be able to vote on Marshall this year unless there's quick action by Johnston and Eastland. Marshall's salary will be cut off if he's not confirmed before the Senate adjourns.

Letters To The Editor

EDITOR OF THE REVIEW:

A study of assistance to transients and migratory families who are served in East Liverpool shows they are better cared for than many local families. This includes families who live and maintain a home in the low salary bracket, as well as applicants who seek temporary aid, and continued public assistance.

The cost of food and shelter for one night is $3.50 per individual transient. In comparison, a family of five individuals in a $75-a-week salary bracket has less than $2.50 per day per individual. It is assumed that welfare applicants are much less.

Through interviews, 60 per cent of transient applicants have said they had received aid from various private citizens and other benevolent groups and agencies in East Liverpool area, which is additional to Salvation Army aid. It is feared that if duplication of services of this nature to transients in this area continues it will encourage the growth of transient applications.

THE SALVATION ARMY in East Liverpool has a rotating file of 3,000 applicants and new ones have been added almost daily. One out of three applies for additional assistance every two years and some more often. We have 72 local resident transients in East Liverpool. A small percentage gets benefits of different kinds. The remainder are alcoholics and unempoyables.

The Salvation Army records disclose we were visited with 512 statewide resident transients who do receive some benefits and this could be supplemented in their community if they would ask for it. This would include institutional care. Many have refused this type of service. A record number of 2,348 are from surrounding states, excluding 57 aliens. There were 113 women and 212 children. The largest percentage of transients are found in the 40 and 50 age group.

From the 3,000 applicants, we recorded 1,214 men who claimed alcohol was their problem; 1,104 said they used alcohol, but it is only a minor problem; the remainder of the 3,000 made no commitments; 1,942 had no educational background; approximately 2,500 were considered unemployables because of age, alcoholism, and educational and other handicaps; 1,731 made no religious commitments.

It is noted in our interviews with migrators that many take advantage of services by charitable organizations for pleasure trips. It is also noted that families who returned from vacations had more money when they returned then when they started. It is especially noted that in Ohio state, places of Salvation Army services to transient people are not much more than 50 miles apart, and in many cases much less. This does not include services of other benevolent groups which are made available in the same area.

In communities where law enforcement agencies have carried heavy burdens of unsolved assault, petty larcencies and other misdemeanors, there are no reasons for suspicion that some migratory people have been a contributing factor.

Service to the migratory people is only one of the many services offered and performed by the Salvation Army in this community.

We suggest that private citizens should protect themselves and their community and their benevolent giving by being well informed as to the services rendered to this group of people. Those who work for and help migratory people should be well informed of their nature and their living habits. Proper referrals should be made to institutions which have professional services available.

Services to transients in this area appear to be many and the resources are small. It would be well for people in this community to do some serious thinking regarding this group of people. Transients in this area are better cared for than one thinks.

Bonnie Banks

The bonnie bonnie banks of Loch Lomond may some day become a Scottish national park.

Scotland at present has no national parks in the American sense. England numbers only eight, though it has hundreds of parks administered locally.

Lomond has attracted increasing numbers of sightseers since the early 16th century; vacationers now are overcrowding the public recreation areas and camping sites. With the population of nearby Glasgow growing rapidly, both naturalists and citizens are calling for national protection of Great Britain's largest fresh - water lake.

Located in the southwest corner of Scotland, Loch Lomond is 24 miles long and 5 miles wide.

Salem Driver Hurt In Crash At Wellsville

A Salem man, injured when his car struck an embankment on Route 39 near Wellsville Sunday morning, is in "fair" condition today in City Hospital.

Two other persons were injured in five district traffic accidents over the weekend, the Lisbon State Highway Patrol reported.

Ralph Waldo Blackburn, 40, of Salem is hospitalized with injuries received Sunday at 10:30 a. m. when his eastbound coach went off Route 39 and crashed into an embankment eight - tenths of a mile west of Wellsville.

He suffered lacerations of the forehead and abrasions of the face and left knee. Officers said there was extensive damage to his 1954 model coach. No charges were filed.

Franklin H. Miller, 34, of Lisbon R. D. 1 received abrasions of the right side of the forehead and face and a possible concussion when he lost control on a curve on State Route 518 near West Point and struck an embankment Saturday at 12:30 a. m.

Officers said Miller, westbound, was traveling too fast for conditions. He was cited on a charge of driving left of center. Miller was taken to Salem City Hospital for treatment.

Nettie Stewart, 61, of Hamlin, W. Va., received a laceration of the right elbow when a car in which she was a passenger was struck in the rear by a tractor-trailer rig Sunday at 7:55 p. m. on Route 7 near Brookside Park.

The rig, operated by Sam Minich, 26, of Clinton, R. D. 1, struck the sedan of Charles Riley, 31, of Barboursville, W. Va. Minich was cited on a charge of failure to halt in the assured clear distance.

Darlene K. Stephens, 18, of 1161 Lisbon St., escaped unhurt when her 1962 model sedan left a curve and struck a sign along Route 7 near Columbiana today at 1:15 a. m. Officers said there was moderate damage to the car. The sign is owned by Rural Supply Co. of Middleton R. D. 2.

Oscar S. Smith, 50, of Salem R. D. 2 was cited on a charge of reckless operation after his sedan went off Route 62 and damaged farm equipment of Earl Bardo Saturday at 9:10 p. m.

Salineville Man Cited

BERGHOLZ — A Salineville area man was cited for driving while under the influence of alcohol following an accident on Route 524 about two miles west of here Saturday afternoon at 3:15. The Wintersville State Highway Patrol said a car driven by William H. Hildreth, 49, of Salineville R. D. 2 plunged over a 20-foot embankment after leaving the highway. He suffered lacerations of the face and fingers of the right hand.

Beaver Plans CD Sessions

The Midland Civil Defense unit plans to be represented at a Beaver Countywide meeting of Civil Defense directors, assistant directors and shelter officers Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Municipal Building on Darling Rd. in Chippewa Township.

David Schwerha, director at Midland, plans to attend. He said it is hoped that several of the auxiliary police of the Civil Defense will attend. Ross I. Webb, Western Pennsylvania area director, will discuss the national shelter survey.

The announcement of the countywide meeting was made at a meeting of the Midland unit Saturday night in the Borough Building.

Communications from the Western Pennsylvania area were read concerning drastic budgets cuts, action on applications for Federal contributions withheld pending completion of the national budget and instructions on the partially-completed county surveys.

The first phase of the county plan, drawn up by Michael Baker Jr., Inc., Rochester engineers, has been completed in Midland. It concerned a survey of potentially acceptable public shelters.

The borough is in the second phase now which includes getting permission from owners for possible use of potential shelters.

Next meeting will be Sept. 29.

Hancock Youngsters Find Weather Balloon

A weather balloon sent up Friday from Pittsburgh was found in a field Sunday afternoon near the home of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Smith Jr. of New Cumberland Route 1.

It was found by the Smiths' children, Susan, David, Ricky, Robbie and Linda, and two neighbor children, Penny Lee Pugh and Terry Pugh, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pugh.

The dark brown balloon had an orange parachute attached. Mrs. Smith said the box attached to the balloon will be mailed today to the Weather Bureau Station at Joliet, Ill.

$50,000 Now Offered In Cape Cod Robbery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster Gen. J. Edward Day raised to $50,000 today the reward offered for the solution of the $1.5 million Cape Cod mail robbery.

Day told a House Government Activities subcommittee investigating the case that he is ordering the entire amount appropriated by Congress to his department for reward offers to be posted on this one case.

A reward of $2,000 previously had been offered.

Venus

caused the Atlas Agena B booster to waver from its course and it was destroyed by the range safety officer about five minutes after launching. The Soviet Union shot a probe within 62,000 miles of Venus last year but received no information because of a dead radio.

The Atlas-Agena B performed as planned today. Five minutes after launching Agena B ignited and settled into an orbit 115 miles high and, in effect, became a space launch platform from which Mariner 2 was unloosed.

The Agena B's engine cut off and the 22-foot long vehicle coasted in a so-called parking orbit for about 17 minutes until it was in an opportune position over the South Atlantic Ocean to place the spacecraft on the desired trajectory.

Then the Agena B fired again to kick Mariner 2 free.

Although Venus is only 69 million miles from earth now and will be 36 million miles away at the planned interception time, Mariner 2 is to follow a high-arching path of more than 180 million miles to reach its destination.

The circuitous route is necessary because the spacecraft had to be aimed far in front of the lane so that Mariner 2 and Venus will achieve the near-encounter in mid-December.

Complexity of the firing maneuver is demonstrated by the speeds of the three bodies involved: earth 66,600 miles an hour and Venus 79,200 miles, both in orbit about the sun; Mariner 25,500 mph at start, slowing to less than 7,000 miles for most of the journey and accelerating to 91,600 miles during the Venus fly-by.

If all goes well—as the spacecraft makes its half-hour sweep across Venus' sunlit side, six delicate sensing devices will seek to penetrate the dense cloud cover which for centuries has concealed secrets of the planet from man's inquisitive eyes and instruments.

The sensors will measure such things as temperatures, magnetic fields, radiation, solar plasma, cosmic dust and other phenomena which can be interpreted into basic knowledge of the nature and composition of the Venusian atmosphere.

The instruments will have only 30 minutes to gather their data, then Mariner 2 is to speed on into eternal orbit about the sun.

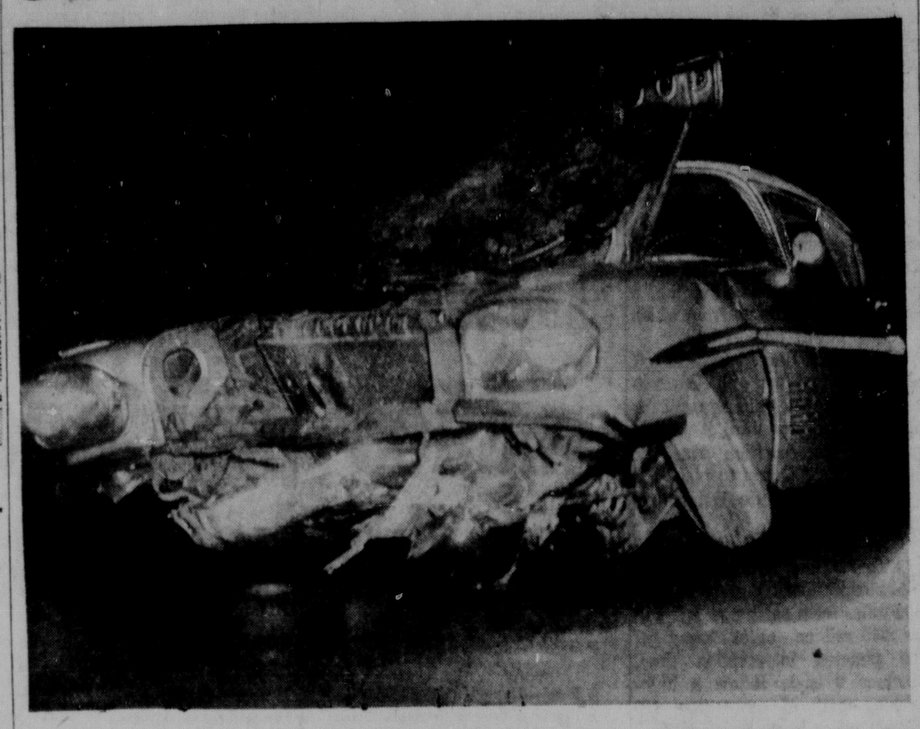
Driver Hurt Slightly

Car Smashes Into Slide



A Salineville area man's car was damaged extensively when he crashed into a large rock slide on the Route 7 "super road" three-tenths of a mile south of the city limits at 1:55 a.m. today.

The slide, described as "good-sized" by the Lisbon State Highway Patrol, apparently was loosened from the overhanging cliff by last night's rain.

John W. Malone, 23, of Salineville R.D. 1, driving west in the 1958 model sedan, received only minor injuries.

Malone's car traveled a long distance down on its undercarriage after striking the rock slide, but remained on the highway. The driver said he escaped serious injury because he was using a seat belt.

He was treated at City Hospital at 2:25 for a possible knee injury and abrasions of the forehead and lower lip.

The patrol said Malone's car skidded down the highway on its frame after the impact nearly tore off the front wheels.

The slide blocked one westbound lane and part of another. Malone, a millwright, was cited on a charge of driving at excessive speed, the patrol reported.

neutralist delegations at the Geneva conference and takes account of improved western methods of detecting underground explosions. But he stressed it also provides for international inspection on the site of a suspicious earth tremor, a provision that assured in advance its rejection by the Russians.

He said the United States and Britain, while still preferring a comprehensive treaty including a ban on underground nuclear explosions, were offering the partial ban in the belief that it would represent "a substantial positive gain for society."

Kuznetsov was quoted by Western conference sources as saying the Western proposal for a partial ban was "a stimulus to nuclear war."

The Soviet delegate insisted that any treaty banning atomic explosions must include underground nuclear tests.

At the same time, conference sources said Kuznetsov rejected out of hand the second proposal, calling for a ban on all tests in all environments for all time, but with provisions for compulsory international inspection on the site of a suspicious tremor which could be an earthquake or a clandestine underground explosion.

President John F. Kennedy and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan said in a joint statement that unlike underground testing, nuclear tests in the atmosphere, underwater and in outer space "can be effectively verified without on-site inspections."

Throughout the long Geneva nuclear negotiations the Russians have steadfastly balked on all proposals for on-site inspections of tests.

Kennedy and Macmillan expressed in their joint statement a strong preference for a clear-cut ban on all nuclear testing.

They said: "For the safety and security of all of us, this deadly competition must be halted."

But they said they are prepared to conclude an early agreement, covering the more limited field, "if this represents the widest area of agreement possible at this time."

Andrew T. Hatcher, assistant White House press secretary, in handing out the Kennedy-Macmillan statement, refused to amplify it in any way.

"The statement speaks for itself," he said.

Kennedy and Macmillan said: "A guaranteed end to all nuclear testing in all environments is a fundamental objective of the free world."

Their statement continued:

"We are deeply convinced that the achievement of this objective would serve our best national interests and the national interests of all nations of the world."

Cycle Mishap Injures Pair

Robert L. Taylor, 34, of Boyd St., and his son, Thomas, 10, were injured when the father's motorcycle skidded and upset Saturday night on an oil slick on Pennsylvania Ave. 500 feet west of Central Ave., police reported.

Taylor is in "good" condition today at City Hospital with a fracture of the left knee. His son was released after treatment for abrasions of the left elbow and the abdomen.

Taylor told police he was headed east on Pennsylvania Ave. at a low rate of speed when the cycle upset on the oil-slicked pavement, damaging the headlight and windshield. He was taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

Patrolman Paul Blevins investigated. The mishap was timed at 8:03.

Two autos were damaged in a collision Sunday at 1:50 p.m. at St. Clair Ave. and Walnut St., police said.

The mishap involved a 1953 two-door sedan driven by Okey P. Fryman, 53, of 747 Daisy Ln. and a 1961 four-door sedan operated by Roger Babb, 21, of Watterson Ave., officers said. There was damage to the left front of Fryman's car and the left side of Babb's auto.

Fryman told police he was driving west on Walnut St. and turning onto St. Clair Ave. He said he halted for the stop sign at the intersection, then halted again after proceeding through it. Babb was driving downgrade on St. Clair and turning onto Walnut, officers said.

Carol J. Finlay Becomes Bride Of R. G. McGaffick

MRS. R. G. McGAFFICK
Bride Of Aug. 11 Nuptials.

Miss Carol Jane Finlay wore a sheath gown of satin - faced organza with a detachable train when she became the bride of Ronald G. McGaffic the evening of Aug. 11 at 7:30 o'clock in the Calvary Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Finlay, 709 Sophia St., and her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd McGaffick of the Lisbon - Salem Rd.

The Rev. Irwin E. Jennings, pastor, officiated for the double-ring ceremony before an altar banked with palms and ferns. Satin bows marked the family pews. William Richards, church organist, presented a half-hour of wedding music. Ernest Lowe sang "Because," "The Lord's Prayer" and "Whither Thou Goest."

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. The fitted bodice of her gown was styled with a Sabrina neckline, outlined with embroidered Alencon lace, and bracelet - length sleeves. The lace cummerbund was highlighted with pearls and crystal beads. The skirt was accented with self-fabric roses.

A fingertip veil of silk illusion was attached to her lace cap trimmed with seed pearls and crystals. She carried an arrangement of white roses and stephanotis placed on a white Bible.

Mrs. Arlene Nagy was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Donna Downs cousin of the bride, Miss Joan Watkins and Miss Linda Weber. They wore princess-style dresses of poudre blue chiffon. The fitted bodices were fashioned of white chiffon and lace. Matching cabbage roses with flutter veils formed their headpieces. All carried cascade bouquets of pink and white carnations tied with satin streamers.

Beth Lucas, as flower girl, wore a nylon dress of aqua trimmed with white lace. She had a matching headband covered with roses and carried a basket of flowers. Gregory Albaugh, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Roger McGaffick served as his brother's best man. Ushers were Terry DeJane, cousin of the bridegroom, Sam Densmore and Gary Johnson.

The mother of the bride chose a floral sheath and the bridegroom's mother wore blue lace. White accessories and rosebud corsages complemented their attire.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. A three-tier cake, topped with a miniature bridal couple, centered the buffet table, decorated with pink and white carnations and silver candelabra.

Aides were Mrs. Gertrude Williamson, Mrs. Vera Miller, Mrs. Edith Albaugh, Mrs. Gladys McLandsborough and Mrs. Elizabeth Smith.

Out-of-town guests were from Cleveland, Scio, Cuyahoga Falls, Kokomo and Chicago.

For her honeymoon to Miami, Fla., the bride traveled in a Navy and white coat and dress with white accessories and her bridal corsage.

The bride is a 1958 graduate of East Liverpool High School and attended Youngstown University. She was graduated in 1961 from the Youngstown Hospital Association School of Nursing and is employed on the staff of South Side Hospital in Youngstown.

Her husband was graduated from David Anderson High School in Lisbon and served two years with the Marine Corps. He attended Youngstown University and is a steel broker.

The newlyweds will reside in Salem.

Boardman Girl, Lisbon Man Marry At Double Ring Rites

Wedding vows were pledged by Miss Bonita Rae Miller and Evan Robert Adams in a double ring ceremony Friday evening at 7:30 at the Boardman Methodist Church with the Rev. George Franklin officiating.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Miller of Maple Dr., Boardman. Mr. and Mrs. Leland Adams of the Fairfield Rd., Lisbon, are the parents of the bridegroom.

Palms, ferns and vases of white gladiolus, mums, and pom pons decorated the altar and on either side were lighted tapers in seven-branched candelabra. The bridal aisle was marked with white streamers, flowers and greenery.

Organ Numbers Given

Organ selections were "O, Perfect Love" and "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown fashioned of brocaded organza. The fitted bodice and jewel neckline were accented with long tapered sleeves and the ballerina length skirt was bell shaped. Her illusion veil was attached to a leaf - patterned crown. She carried a colonial arrangement of gardenias.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Miss Suzanne Miller, her sister. Mrs. Paul Brown of Petosky, Mich., was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Jayne Seigel and Miss Marilyn Axelson, both of Youngstown. Their gowns were of coral chiffon with tucked bodices, jewel necklines and full skirts. Their colonial bouquets were of talisman roses and baby's breath.

Attendants Named

Virgil N. Stroia Jr. of North Canton, a fraternity brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Robert Gilbert of Uniontown, Ohio, Ralph Porter of Cuyahoga Falls and David Hartman of Lisbon.

The mother of the bride chose a silk shantung sheath of autumn gold and gold accessories. The bridegroom's mother was attired in a re-embroidered brocaded sheath of lupine blue with matching accessories. Both had corsages of yellow roses.

Miss Becky Walters of Lisbon, Miss Kathy Fife of Canonsburg, Pa., and Miss Sarah Morris of Alliance served at the reception at the church parlors.

Miss Nancy Kornick of Youngstown registered the 150 guests from Chester, Newell, Canton, Dayton, Uniontown, Lisbon, Salem, Gallipolis, Columbiana, Cleveland, Alliance, Pittsburgh and Petosky.

Hints from Heloise

— By Heloise Cruse —

We have had so many requests and complaints on the subject of electric dishwashers that we would like to pass on these simple hints for those who have dishwashers.

There are many things that cause a film on glass: Overloading or improper loading of your machine, infrequent washing, low water temperature, low water pressure, water conditions such as hardness and iron content. Unapproved detergents and incorrect quanity of detergents can also be a cause.

The smallest amount of detergent should be used when cleaning glasses. Of course individual conditions should be taken into consideration when judging the amount.

If your hot water system does not keep water hot right up to the machine, let the water run from the faucet for a minute or until it is steaming hot before starting your machine!

MANY TYPES of water will discolor aluminum-ware. Do not sprinkle your detergent directly on aluminum utensils or dishes. Put your detergent in your cup or sprinkle it on the bottom of the dishwasher before loading it with dishes.

Test whether you have a difficult water condition by washing a piece of aluminum to see if it becomes discolored.

Excessive water hardness may create a tendency toward film on glasses. Excessive total mineral content may cause water spotting.

Two Essentials

Two things must be done to correct the filming and spotting on your dishes.

Naturally, the film and spots must be removed first and then your improper operating conditions corrected.

To remove the film and spots, wash and rinse the dishes in your dishwasher with detergent in the usual manner, but do not dry.

Remove all silverware, cutlery, pots and pans and hand polish.

While the dishes and glasses are still wet, set ¾ cup of household bleach on the lower dish rack in a cup or bowl. Close door carefully to avoid upsetting strong bleach. Now, run the dishwasher through the complete cycle without any detergent, just the bleach and don't dry.

DON'T WASH any silverware, cutlery, pots or pans in this bleaching step, only glass ware and china.

After the bleach water has completely drained out (without drying cycle), place a bowl containing two cups of vinegar on lower rack. Close the machine and finish the rinsing and drying cycles in the normal manner. Do not allow the dishes to dry between any of these treatments.

I have just experimented with these complete instructions and have had wonderful results.

By using the above procedure, you will not only get all the film off your glasses and dishes but the little wires and the insides of your dishwasher will be cleaned at the same time.

Now, go put all of those glasses in that dishwasher and let's get them clean and shining again!

Party Honors Bailey With Weirton Fete

WEIRTON — Rep. John W. McCormack, speaker of the House of Representatives, told 500 Democrats Saturday night that "it is essential to the party to re-elect Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey of Clarksburg to project further President Kennedy's New Frontier program."

Rep. McCormack, who ranks behind only Vice President Lyndon Johnson in the line of succession to the presidency, was principal speaker at a testimonial banquet for Bailey in the Weirton Community Center, sponsored by the Hancock - Brooke County Democratic Executive Committees.

Both the House speaker and Bailey appealed for "party harmony" in the Nov. 6 general election.

Bailey, completing his 16th year as a congressman from the old 3rd District, said the banquet marked his 106th public appearance in the 13 months since the new and enlarged 1st District was established.

"Once party harmony is achieved, we will be on our way to victory," Bailey said.

"There are just not enough Republicans to prevent it. We have better than a 40,000 majority in registration in the new 1st District," Bailey told the crowd.

Rep. McCormack, who has been in the House since 1917, paid tribute to Bailey as a man and as a legislator. He recalled that upon the death of Sam Rayburn, the first person to pledge support to McCormack for the speakership was Bailey.

"I'll never forget that," the Massachusetts Democrat said. He described Bailey as "a man who enjoys the confidence of President Kennedy."

Charles I. Jones of Weirton was toastmaster. County Prosecuting Atty. Floyd R. Tarr gave the welcome. Among those introduced was Richard L. Wright of Chester, Route 30, Executive Committee chairman in Hancock County.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Do you ever feel like letting off steam by smashing things?

A Miami man, realizing many Americans have such a desire, has copyrighted an idea for a "frustration room." In it, the jangle - nerved gentry can heave dishes, lamps, light bulbs, small furniture pieces with bang - up abandon.

The designer, Harry Linsky, reported that a motel near Chicago has installed his smash chamber, and that other places are asking about it. A corporation is considering one for board meetings, he said.

Linsky has a stock of slightly damaged crockery to supply frustration rooms.

Johnson, Turks Air Military Aid

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson talked with Turkish leaders today about continuing American economic and military aid to this strategic North Atlantic Treaty Organization ally.

Sources said the vice president told them the United States foresees the need for direct economic aid for at least the next two years but is looking forward to the day when the help will be in the form of development projects rather than direct aid.

Premier Ismet Inonu and President Cemal Gursel gave Johnson an account of Turkey's own plans for economic recovery through a five-year program expected to be announced shortly.

Johnson arrived Sunday for a four-day stay in Turkey.

Woman Forfeits $10 After Lisbon Mishap

LISBON — Juinona Joyce Porter, 37, of New Philadelphia forfeited a $10 appearance bond Saturday in mayor's court following a traffic collision.

She was charged with reckless operation at 2:30 p. m. when she caught the left rear fender of a parked car as she backed into a parking place on W. Lincoln Way by the Courthouse.

Chief of Police Roy E. Patterson estimated $75 damage to the fender of the other car, owned by Jack Francis Sigh, 41, of Pittsburgh.

$2 Million Motel Due In Cincinnati District

CINCINNATI (AP) — A Cincinnati motel operator has agreed to build and run a $2 million Howard Johnson Motor Lodge in suburban Sharonville, to be developed as a potential year-round vacation spot.

Operators of Carrousel Motels Inc. said the new facility is to be on a 23-acre site along Interstate 75, and be ready for use next summer.

3 Held In Stab Death Of Man, 26, At Dayton

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Three men are being held in Montgomery County jail for investigation of the death Saturday night of Roger Glenn Tipton, 26, a native of Powell County, Ky. Tipton died of stab wounds suffered in a fight at a home where 15 to 20 persons were attending a party.

Witnesses said Tipton was knocked through a glass storm door but others said one of the suspects had a butcher knife.

Hints from Heloise

— By Heloise Cruse —

We have had so many requests and complaints on the subject of electric dishwashers that we would like to pass on these simple hints for those who have dishwashers.

There are many things that cause a film on glass: Overloading or improper loading of your machine, infrequent washing, low water temperature, low water pressure, water conditions such as hardness and iron content. Unapproved detergents and incorrect quanity of detergents can also be a cause.

The smallest amount of detergent should be used when cleaning glasses. Of course individual conditions should be taken into consideration when judging the amount.

If your hot water system does not keep water hot right up to the machine, let the water run from the faucet for a minute or until it is steaming hot before starting your machine!

MANY TYPES of water will discolor aluminum-ware. Do not sprinkle your detergent directly on aluminum utensils or dishes. Put your detergent in your cup or sprinkle it on the bottom of the dishwasher before loading it with dishes.

Test whether you have a difficult water condition by washing a piece of aluminum to see if it becomes discolored.

Excessive water hardness may create a tendency toward film on glasses. Excessive total mineral content may cause water spotting.

Two Essentials

Two things must be done to correct the filming and spotting on your dishes.

Naturally, the film and spots must be removed first and then your improper operating conditions corrected

To remove the film and spots, wash and rinse the dishes in your dishwasher with detergent in the usual manner, but do not dry.

Remove all silverware, cutlery, pots and pans and hand polish.

While the dishes and glasses are still wet, set ¾ cup of household bleach on the lower dish rack in a cup or bowl. Close door carefully to avoid upsetting strong bleach. Now, run the dishwasher through the complete cycle without any detergent, just the bleach and don't dry.

DON'T WASH any silverware, cutlery, pots or pans in this bleaching step, only glass ware and china.

After the bleach water has completely drained out (without drying cycle), place a bowl containing two cups of vinegar on lower rack. Close the machine and finish the rinsing and drying cycles in the normal manner. Do not allow the dishes to dry between any of these treatments.

I have just experimented with these complete instructions and have had wonderful results.

By using the above procedure, you will not only get all the film off your glasses and dishes but the little wires and the insides of your dishwasher will be cleaned at the same time.

Now, go put all of those glasses in that dishwasher and let's get them clean and shining again!

Today In History

Today is Monday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1962. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this day in 1941, former French vice-premier Pierre Laval and a pro-German French journalist, Marcel Deat, were shot and seriously wounded at Versailles. They were reviewing a French volunteer corps about to depart for Poland to train for combat against Russian armies.

On this date

In 1776, British redcoats won the battle of Long Island during the American Revolution.

In 1867, a patent was granted for a railroad crossing gate at Boston.

In 1915, Gen. John J. Pershing's wife and three daughters were burned to death at the Presidio in San Francisco.

In 1928, the Kellogg - Briand Treaty was signed in Paris by representatives of 15 nations.

In 1945, Gen. MacArthur approved the surrender of the Japanese forces in Hong Kong to British military authorities.

Today's birthdays:

Novelist C. S. Forester is 63.

Inferior Sheathing Board Can Bring Lot Of Trouble

There is a big difference between the way new houses are built and the manner in which houses were built in the old days. Most of the difference is in the materials used in the construction.

One trouble with new methods is that some substantial manufacturer, or his engineering staff, developed a good, solid substitute for something, and then along came an imitator with an inferior product which is used in the same manner and looks identical to the good item.

A large percentage of the small houses being erected today do not have wood sheathing covering the frame, but have a structural board of some kind instead. The shingles of the house are then nailed into these sheets.

If this board is good quality you have a good job, but when it is inferior material, you are going to have trouble because the nails driven through the shingles cannot hold in cheap, spongy material.

Another difficulty with inferior sheathing board is that if it becomes saturated with water, it loses its tension. The result will be that nailheads will be popping out all over the surface and the shingles will be loose on the wall.

If an examination of a wall shows a number of nails protruding, the best thing to do is draw them out and drive in new nails slightly larger. These must be galvanized for two reasons: to prevent rust staining and because the galvanizing makes a nail comparatively rough and it will hold better.

Police Seek Suspect In Wounding Of Trio

PIQUA, Ohio (AP)—Police continued their search today for a 50-year-old Piqua man, wanted for questioning about the wounding of three persons at a night spot near here early Sunday. The victims, Betty Dyke, 39, her daughter, Dianne Godwin, 21, and 42-year-old Albert Ostendorf, were admitted to a hospital here. Mrs. Dyke and Ostendorf were in serious condition. Motive for the shooting was not determined immediately.

U.S. Plans Cleveland Retraining Programs

CLEVELAND (A)—Five major job retraining progams will be conducted by the federal government here over the next three years at a cost of $8 million Dr. Seymour L. Wolfbein, deputy assistant secretary of labor, said on a visit to Cleveland Sunday.

He said the programs would begin "in the next few days" and retrain unemployed as machine operators, auto transmission repairmen, auto body repairmen, clerks and stenographers, and licensed practical nurses.

CONTEMPORARY TWO-STORY. Either half of the first floor of this livable modern home may be closed off and act independently of the other. A stone fireplace is designed as part of one living room wall and a glass wall affords a view of the terrace. The dining room is separated from the living room by a translucent screen and from the entry way by a freestanding guest closet. Neither extends to the ceiling, giving the living area a feeling of spaciousness. The kitchen serves the dining room and also the family room, outdoor terrace and basement recreation room. Upstairs, the master suite includes bedroom, dressing room with large closets and private bath. The three additional bedrooms also are large. Each floor contains 1,050 square feet. Suggestions Are Made On Use Of Bulbs

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

It is now a common practice in large industries to form national organizations to conduct research and dispense information relating to certain products rather than to the specific output of a single manufacturer.

Data thus obtained becomes available to competing manufacturers as well as to the general public.

One such organization, the American Home Lighting Institute, has come up with some facts and figures which boil down to this warning: don't try to compensate for insufficient lighting with higher wattage bulbs than those specified on lighting fixtures.

Heat generated by light bulbs can create a hazard in certain types of fixtures if the limitations are exceeded. The added heat not only poses a threat to nearby cumbustible materials; it can cause deterioration of insulation on conductors within the outlet box.

There is no danger from lighting fixtures which carry the Underwriters' Laboratories label as long as you stick to the wattage of bulbs marked on the fixture and install them properly.

If present fixtures are too small or antiquated to shed enough light, add some fixtures or replace the old ones with new, larger fixtures.

Besides the fire hazard, if the older fixtures are not designed to guard against glare, discomfort is merely multiplied by using higher wattage bulbs.

Another organization whose members are competing manufacturers is the Insulation Board Institute.

It is engaged right now in a campaign to convince the public that it can do much to bring quiet to the home. Naturally, it is plugging for the use of acoustical fiberboard ceiling tile and other types of insulation boards as noise absorbers.

But it also advises the home owner that there are a number of other steps that can be taken to cut down annoying noises.

The Institute's technical director, Robert A. LaCosse, points out some of these steps: tightening gutters, downspouts and shutters; using heavy curtains, drapes and rugs; leveling and lubricating appliances; having noisy plumbing silenced; reducing furnace, blower and duct noises; adding shrubs, trees and solid fences in areas where outside noises are prevalent, and installing storm windows and doors.

Colombian Army Kills 10 Terrorist Bandits

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—The army said Sunday 10 bandits were killed and three wounded in a clash at Geneva, about 70 miles north of Cali.

Col. Bernardo Leguizamo, commander of the army battalion in the area, said 31 of the bandits were captured. He said one soldier was wounded.

An outbreak of terrorist activity that has taken more than 800 lives prompted the government to step up an army campaign against the bandits.

Manufacturer Dies

CLEVELAND (AP) — John H. Selfridge, 72, board chairman of Selfridge Co., plumbers' supplies manufacturer, died at Cleveland Clinic of a heart ailment Sunday. A native of Ironton, he was married at Alliance in 1911 to Olive Messmore, who died three years ago. A son, John R., survives.

Water Heater Danger Signs Are Outlined

CHICAGO — Today's quality water heaters are built to last for many years, and, properly sized accordingly to a family's needs, will do so with little care required.

Eventually, though, comes the time for a plumbing contractor to replace the heater. And you should know the danger signs of a burning - out heater in order to avoid an inconvenient emergency.

First of all, says the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, a good water heater usually does not wear out — the heating surfaces slowly burn out from abuse by the unknowing home owner.

If a water heater is overworked because it is not large enough, or because of built-up sediment in the tank, it clearly will not last as long as one of the right size that receives proper maintenance. You can get rid of most sediment by draining out all muddy-looking water every month.

Danger sign number one is the awareness that there never seems to be enough hot water. An undersized or sediment-encrusted heater cannot be expected to perform efficiently and can rapidly burn out from the extra work load.

Another danger sign is a thumping or cracking sound from the heater when a hot water faucet is turned on. This happens when layers of sediment (caused primarily by hard water) build up on the floor of the tank and on the heating elements, producing a heat-retarding scale. The thumping is actually a series of small explosions of steam between the layers of scale.

Let your plumbing contractor be the guide in selection of a new water heater. His sizing charts will tell you what size your family needs and he can advise you about water softening equipment if this is needed.

A final point to remember — if you buy a water heater with only a one-year manufacturer's guarantee, you're just playing a betting game with the manufacturer. A quality water heater is always the best buy.

When an old-time recipe calls for a tablespoon of grated fresh horseradish, it's safe to use two tablespoons of the present - day bottle variety.

Steps Offered For Cleaning Of Flagstones

Question: We bought our house about three years ago. It was several years old at that time.

The enclosed patio has a flagstone floor. The flagstones have faded considerably and have an old, dingy look to them. Can you tell us whether the flagstones can be restored in some way?

Answer: Because the patio is enclosed, you can use the same kind of penetrating sealer on them as is used on wooden floors. Clean the stones thoroughly, being certain that all hardened dirt on the surfaces is removed.

When the stones are dry, brush on a coat of penetrating sealer. After the sealer has soaked in for about 10 minutes, wipe off any excess with a clean cloth.

Wait 24 hours, then brush off any dirt or dust that may have collected since the first coat was applied.

Apply a second coat and, again after a 10-minute wait, wipe off any excess with a clean cloth. Another 24-hour interval — and go through the same procedure a third time.

It is especially important that, after the third coat, all excess sealer is wiped off after 10 minutes. This wiping routine is necessary to be certain that the surface of the flagstones is not too slippery.

Floods Sweep Nepal, Capital Area Isolated

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)—This capital has been cut off from western Nepal by floods, which washed away the only linking bridge over the Trisuli River.

A message reaching here Sunday also said six army men and two civilian officials guarding Nepal's border with Tibet were swept away by floodwaters near Rasuwa.

Today In History

Today is Monday, Aug. 27, the 239th day of 1962. There are 126 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this day in 1941, former French vice-premier Pierre Laval and a pro-German French journalist, Marcel Deat, were shot and seriously wounded at Versailles. They were reviewing a French volunteer corps about to depart for Poland to train for combat against Russian armies.

On this date

In 1776, British redcoats won the battle of Long Island during the American Revolution.

In 1867, a patent was granted for a railroad crossing gate at Boston.

In 1915, Gen. John J. Pershing's wife and three daughters were burned to death at the Presidio in San Francisco.

In 1928, the Kellogg - Briand Treaty was signed in Paris by representatives of 15 nations.

In 1945, Gen. MacArthur approved the surrender of the Japanese forces in Hong Kong to British military authorities.

Today's birthdays:

Novelist C. S. Forester is 63.

Inferior Sheathing Board Can Bring Lot Of Trouble

There is a big difference between the way new houses are built and the manner in which houses were built in the old days. Most of the difference is in the materials used in the construction.

One trouble with new methods is that some substantial manufacturer, or his engineering staff, developed a good, solid substitute for something, and then along came an imitator with an inferior product which is used in the same manner and looks identical to the good item.

A large percentage of the small houses being erected today do not have wood sheathing covering the frame, but have a structural board of some kind instead. The shingles of the house are then nailed into these sheets.

If this board is good quality you have a good job, but when it is inferior material, you are going to have trouble because the nails driven through the shingles cannot hold in cheap, spongy material.

Another difficulty with inferior sheathing board is that if it becomes saturated with water, it loses its tension. The result will be that nailheads will be popping out all over the surface and the shingles will be loose on the wall.

If an examination of a wall shows a number of nails protruding, the best thing to do is draw them out and drive in new nails slightly larger. These must be galvanized for two reasons: to prevent rust staining and because the galvanizing makes a nail comparatively rough and it will hold better.

Police Seek Suspect In Wounding Of Trio

PIQUA, Ohio (AP)—Police continued their search today for a 50-year-old Piqua man, wanted for questioning about the wounding of three persons at a night spot near here early Sunday. The victims, Betty Dyke, 39, her daughter, Dianne Godwin, 21, and 42-year-old Albert Ostendorf, were admitted to a hospital here. Mrs. Dyke and Ostendorf were in serious condition. Motive for the shooting was not determined immediately.

U.S. Plans Cleveland Retraining Programs

CLEVELAND (A)—Five major job retraining progams will be conducted by the federal government here over the next three years at a cost of $8 million Dr. Seymour L. Wolfbein, deputy assistant secretary of labor, said on a visit to Cleveland Sunday.

He said the programs would begin "in the next few days" and retrain unemployed as machine operators, auto transmission repairmen, auto body repairmen, clerks and stenographers, and licensed practical nurses.

CONTEMPORARY TWO-STORY. Either half of the first floor of this livable modern home may be closed off and act independently of the other. A stone fireplace is designed as part of one living room wall and a glass wall affords a view of the terrace. The dining room is separated from the living room by a translucent screen and from the entry way by a freestanding guest closet. Neither extends to the ceiling, giving the living area a feeling of spaciousness. The kitchen serves the dining room and also the family room, outdoor terrace and basement recreation room. Upstairs, the master suite includes bedroom, dressing room with large closets and private bath. The three additional bedrooms also are large. Each floor contains 1,050 square feet. The house, Homes for Americans HA252P, was designed by Samuel Paul, 89-30 161 St., Jamaica, N. Y.

Water Heater Danger Signs Are Outlined

CHICAGO — Today's quality water heaters are built to last for many years, and, properly sized accordingly to a family's needs, will do so with little care required.

Eventually, though, comes the time for a plumbing contractor to replace the heater. And you should know the danger signs of a burning - out heater in order to avoid an inconvenient emergency.

First of all, says the Plumbing-Heating - Cooling Information Bureau, a good water heater usually does not wear out — the heating surfaces slowly burn out from abuse by the unknowing home owner.

If a water heater is overworked because it is not large enough, or because of built-up sediment in the tank, it clearly will not last as long as one of the right size that receives proper maintenance. You can get rid of most sediment by draining out all muddy-looking water every month.

Danger sign number one is the awareness that there never seems to be enough hot water. An undersized or sediment-encrusted heater cannot be expected to perform efficiently and can rapidly burn out from the extra work load.

Another danger sign is a thumping or cracking sound from the heater when a hot water faucet is turned on. This happens when layers of sediment (caused primarily by hard water) build up on the floor of the tank and on the heating elements, producing a heat-retarding scale. The thumping is actually a series of small explosions of steam between the layers of scale.

Let your plumbing contractor be the guide in selection of a new water heater. His sizing charts will tell you what size your family needs and he can advise you about water softening equipment if this is needed.

A final point to remember — if you buy a water heater with only a one-year manufacturer's guarantee, you're just playing a betting game with the manufacturer. A quality water heater is always the best buy.

When an old-time recipe calls for a tablespoon of grated fresh horseradish, it's safe to use two tablespoons of the present - day bottle variety.

Steps Offered For Cleaning Of Flagstones

Question: We bought our house about three years ago. It was several years old at that time.

The enclosed patio has a flagstone floor. The flagstones have faded considerably and have an old, dingy look to them. Can you tell us whether the flagstones can be restored in some way?

Answer: Because the patio is enclosed, you can use the same kind of penetrating sealer on them as is used on wooden floors. Clean the stones thoroughly, being certain that all hardened dirt on the surfaces is removed.

When the stones are dry, brush on a coat of penetrating sealer. After the sealer has soaked in for about 10 minutes, wipe off any excess with a clean cloth.

Wait 24 hours, then brush off any dirt or dust that may have collected since the first coat was applied.

Apply a second coat and, again after a 10-minute wait, wipe off any excess with a clean cloth. Another 24-hour interval — and go through the same procedure a third time.

It is especially important that, after the third coat, all excess sealer is wiped off after 10 minutes. This wiping routine is necessary to be certain that the surface of the flagstones is not too slippery.

Floods Sweep Nepal, Capital Area Isolated

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)—This capital has been cut off from western Nepal by floods, which washed away the only linking bridge over the Trisuli River.

A message reaching here Sunday also said six army men and two civilian officials guarding Nepal's border with Tibet were swept away by floodwaters near Rasuwa.

Colombian Army Kills 10 Terrorist Bandits

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—The army said Sunday 10 bandits were killed and three wounded in a clash at Geneva, about 70 miles north of Cali.

Col. Bernardo Leguizamo, commander of the army battalion in the area, said 31 of the bandits were captured. He said one soldier was wounded.

An outbreak of terrorist activity that has taken more than 800 lives prompted the government to step up an army campaign against the bandits.

Manufacturer Dies

CLEVELAND (AP) — John H. Selfridge, 72, board chairman of Selfridge Co., plumbers' supplies manufacturer, died at Cleveland Clinic of a heart ailment Sunday. A native of Ironton, he was married at Alliance in 1911 to Olive Messmore, who died three years ago. A son, John R., survives.

Suggestions Are Made On Use Of Bulbs

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

It is now a common practice in large industries to form national organizations to conduct research and dispense information relating to certain products rather than to the specific output of a single manufacturer.

Data thus obtained becomes available to competing manufacturers as well as to the general public.

One such organization, the American Home Lighting Institute, has come up with some facts and figures which boil down to this warning: don't try to compensate for insufficient lighting with higher wattage bulbs than those specified on lighting fixtures.

Heat generated by light bulbs can create a hazard in certain types of fixtures if the limitations are exceeded. The added heat not only poses a threat to nearby cumbustible materials; it can cause deterioration of insulation on conductors within the outlet box.

There is no danger from lighting fixtures which carry the Underwriters' Laboratories label as long as you stick to the wattage of bulbs marked on the fixture and install them properly.

If present fixtures are too small or antiquated to shed enough light, add some fixtures or replace the old ones with new, larger fixtures.

Besides the fire hazard, if the older fixtures are not designed to guard against glare, discomfort is merely multiplied by using higher wattage bulbs.

Another organization whose members are competing manufacturers is the Insulation Board Institute.

It is engaged right now in a campaign to convince the public that it can do much to bring quiet to the home. Naturally, it is plugging for the use of acoustical fiberboard ceiling tile and other types of insulation boards as noise absorbers.

But it also advises the home owner that there are a number of other steps that can be taken to cut down annoying noises.

The Institute's technical director, Robert A. LaCosse, points out some of these steps: tightening gutters, downspouts and shutters; using heavy curtains, drapes and rugs; leveling and lubricating appliances; having noisy plumbing silenced; reducing furnace, blower and duct noises; adding shrubs, trees and solid fences in areas where outside noises are prevalent, and installing storm windows and doors.

Trustees Set Street Work

Further street improvement was approved by the Liverpool Township trustees at a meeting Friday night at City Hall.

A section of 7th Ave., LaCroft, was added to the summer street program.

A report was heard on a meeting with the County Budget Commission at Lisbon. The 1963 township budget was approved.

A discussion was held on whether or not to recall the 1.3-mill fire levy from the fall ballot. The trustees voted to leave the levy on the ballot. It is being voted a year in advance and it was thought the new tax valuation would make some change in revenue.

Approval was given to have four truck tires recapped. A committee of residents from Valley Ave. presented a petition asking that the street be opened its entire length. The trustees will check with Prosecutor G. William Brokaw on what steps now are to be taken.

Chester Brown asked that house numbers be issued homes on Myler Ave. so mail deliveries can be made.

The trustees attended a joint meeting Saturday morning with members of City Council and county commissioners in regard to improving and widening Shadyside Ave. from the city limits to Radio Heights.

The next meeting is Sept. 7.

Family Termed First Home Task By Mrs. Finkbine

CINCINNATI (AP)—"My family is my first job; getting the children readjusted is next," said a weary Mrs. Sherri Finkbine, here to seek a few days rest at her husband's family home in Indiana.

There was a hint of her task in daughter Terry, 7, when Mrs. Finkbine and her husband, Robert, arrived at Greater Cincinnati Airport Sunday night.

They were on the last leg of the return flight from Mrs. Finkbine's thalidomide abortion in Sweden.

Young Terry ran to the steps of the plane when her mother descended and thrust a gift package in her hands.

Flashbulbs started popping, newsmen began questions and movie lights flared, and the little girl became frightened. She started to sob.

"Let her alone," said Mrs. Finkbine. "She's scared."

The little girl's father stopped to comfort her and she went back to the care of her grandmother, while Mrs. Finkbine and her husband agreed to talk briefly with newsmen.

Mrs. Finkbine said she hoped for a good rest with her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Finkbine of Lawrenceburg, before going home to Phoenix, Ariz.

She stated again her belief she had done right in the legal abortion gained in Sweden after being denied in Arizona.

She sought the abortion in fear the infant would be born deformed because she took the sleeping drug thalidomide in early pregnancy. Swedish doctors indicated the drug had affected the unborn fetus.

"I'm just grateful," she said. "I don't blame anybody. It's others who have had these children who have great worries.

"The mail we received in Sweden about this was mostly favorable. The only bad letter we got in Scandinavia was from someone in New York."

Mrs. Finkbine repeated her contention that American abortion laws should not be overturned, but could be modified. She said:

"The thing I believe is that moral, religious and judicial processes should not interfere with a doctor's decision."

Booming Market Looms In Domestic Ceramic Tile

Ceramic tile, a building material 70 centuries old, has undergone a revolution since the end of World War II that has transformed it from a limited - use product to a surfacing material of great versatility.

Once seen mostly in bathrooms, real tile now is used creatively in living rooms, kitchens, bedrooms, foyers, patios, terraces, swimming pools, building exteriors and many other places.

The beauty and utility it provides spurred domestic tile sales from $43 million in 1947 to more than $141 million in 1959. A growing tide of imports since that time cut the domestic tile market to $123 million in 1961.

However, spectacular breakthroughs in the pre-fab panelization of ceramic tile and development of new mortars and grouts, hold promise of greater use of tile in the near future.

"A NEW GOLDEN age of tile could well be before us," said Chester Wenczel of Trenton, N.J., president of the Tile Council of America. "Despite the tremendous damage imports have done, dramatic advances and dynamic new uses could double our market in the near future."

A crash program to perfect ways of fitting tile into modular panels, so that tile can be installed in large-size sheets, currently is under way at the Tile Council research center at Princeton, N. J. The research center already has two working machines to bond tile together at the edges, forming such panels.

"In the near future, tile will be installed in large pre-formed sheets, pre-formed-to-fit for any situation," Wenczel said. "Entire bathroom walls — in finished form — will be put up at one time. Kitchen countertops will come pre-formed. Outside tile walls also will be pre-formed, and will have their own insulation materials or backing."

New resin compounds are used to bond the tile together to form panels. Other epoxy bonding materials, introduced to the commercial market this year under Tile Council licensing, are being used for setting and grouting (filling the joints) conventional tile installations. They resist chemicals and stains and have superior strength. The epoxies are making tile jobs still quicker, surer, cleaner and more economical.

THESE ADVANCES in tile's use —and especially the greatly expanded market for ceramic tile following the World War II — aren't something that just happened. They were made to happen.

It started 17 years ago with the formation of the Tile Council of America, an association of 25 of the nation's leading ceramic tile manufacturers who produce more than 80 per cent of the domestic tile. Since that time, $150 million has been spent by the Tile Council and tile companies on promotion and research, plant expansion and development.

The money has been invested in research to make products more attractive and usable to the consuming public. Capital expenditures have doubled the production of tile plants. The industry has sponsored an ever-expanding program of advertising, promotion and market research to make architects, builders and the general public more tile conscious than ever before.

In research alone, the ceramic tile industry built a half-million-dollar research center at Princeton and added more than $2 million more to develop new techniques, uses and products.

Bringing Up A Family

By GARRY C. MEYERS

Just Punishment Not Resented

A California mother writes: "We have three preschool boys. One thing we believe to be a problem is how to stop back talk. If one of them is corrected you will hear 'bad Mommy' or 'bad Daddy' or there's resentment."

Dr. Garry Meyers

The kind of back talk this mother refers to is usually different from back talk by the child 9, 12 or 15, though in either case there can be resentment. With the older children, there often is anger provoked by the back talk, angry response and argument with him by the parent. Often, too, this older child puts the parent on the witness stand, demanding reasons for the wavering, wobbly and uncertain decision, denial and command.

—:—

IN THE ADVICE to parents on discipline, you may often read or hear from those who are supposed to know that punishment (of all sorts, presumably, at any age) is usually undesirable because it arouses resentment in the child. This has always struck me as absurd.

Having 13 grandchildren of my own, and observing ever so many other families, I have rarely seen resentment in children on being punished and practically never when the punishment was fair, just and consistent.

Punishment itself does not arouse resentment, but unwisely chosen situations for punishing and inconsistent and ineffectual punishment do.

The mother writing of her three little boys under school age does not make clear what she means by corrected. Does she mean when rebuked, yelled at, intercepted, spanked, isolated or made to sit in a chair for a definite period?

When one of her children being corrected says "bad Mommy" or "bad Daddy", does the parent feel badly and thus reward the youngster? Instead, she should act as if she had no feelings.

SHE AND HER husband need to sit down in private and agree on a few things these youngsters must not do in their presence, on the nature of punishment or restraint, and agree to try to be consistent with themselves and with each other.

They need to draw the line between what they want the young child to do and will forbid his doing, holding to the simple principle: make pleasant the many things you want him to do and painful only the few things he must never do.

Also, these parents need to study how these children feel toward one another and find ways to reduce jealousies and conflicts. They need, moreover, to center on quiet, lovely ways of understanding and enjoying these children, providing them with abundant love and security.

Boy, 2 Girls Injured In Darlington Mishap

BEAVER FALLS — A 15-year-old Darlington boy and two Beaver girls were injured late Saturday night when their auto hit a guard rail on the Georgetown Rd. a mile west of Darlington and then dived over an embankment, State Police reported.

Officers said the auto was driven by Ronald Makowski, 15, of Darlington. He was reported in "good" condition at Providence Hospital. Also hurt were Joyce Wills, 17, of Beaver Falls R.D. 1 and Suzan Fulton, 17, of Beaver Falls, both reported in "satisfactory" condition at the hospital.

Boy Killed, 5 Injured As Brick Wall Topples

EASTON, Pa. (AP)—A 15-year-old boy was killed and five other teen-agers were injured Sunday when a two-story brick wall collapsed on them as they played in an abandoned school being torn down.

Authorities said the victim, Eugene Guzzo, was crushed beneath tons of brick as he walked across a plank spanning a 10-foot deep hole in the building's basement.

Firemen and members of a rescue squad dug for several minutes to reach him.

Ann Landers

ANSWERS YOUR PROBLEMS

Dear Ann Landers: My dear sister died two months ago in childbirth. It was her first child and her husband is filled with grief. He turned the baby over to me to raise and I intend to bring her up as if she were my own.

I am 35 years of age and have never married. The baby's father is a fine man and I know he is terribly lonely. We have had some long talks and without coming right out and asking, I'm pretty sure he would like to marry me. I would accept his proposal in a minute, but I'm afraid of what people might say.

Under the circumstances I'm sure my sister would approve. It would be wonderful for the baby, too, to grow up with her own father.

Please give me your thinking on this very important matter. I am going to take your advice. —LOUISVILLE WOMAN.

Dear Woman: A four-or five-month courtship period will tell you what you want to know. Never mind what anyone else says or thinks. If you two get along well together and wish to marry, go ahead.

-:-

Out Of Chains

Dear Ann: I'm 18, graduated from high school last June and went steady with Steve for three straight years. I know what you think of going steady and you are right, but I was too dumb to see it. Steve was the most attractive boy in school and I was plain-looking. I was scared to relax my grip for fear some girl would get him away.

After graduation he began to cool off. He seemed to go out of his way to start an argument. Finally he blew up and said, "Find someone else to haul you around. I feel like you've got me in chains!" That was the way our three-year romance ended.

Now I'm marooned. My telephone never rings, except for a few girl friends who want to know if I've killed myself yet. How can I get back into circulation? Where do I start? Please help me before I dry up and blow away.—FADING FAST.

Dear Fading: A girl who has worn an "Occupied" sign around ner heck for three years can hardly expect the fellows to beat her door down the minute she is available.

Be patient. The word will get around. And while you're waiting, it may be a good idea to have a little party and invite yourself a date.

Longs For Father

Dear Ann: My mother and father were divorced seven years ago. I'm 14 years old now and I remember my father well although I've seen him only once in all that time, and that was six years ago. He was a very good-looking man. My mother says that was the main part of the problem.

Lately my dad has been on my mind a lot. I dream of him often. In my dreams he is always sweet which is the way my mother says he was. I want to write him a letter and tell him I'd like to see him sometime. My mother says he knows where I am and if he wanted to see me he would have done so a long time ago.

He sends Mom support money every month so he knows our address. What is your advice? Mom says she will take your word as final. Should I write or not?—EDITH.

Dear Edith: If you'd like to drop your father a note I see no reason why you should not do so. It may well be that he would like to see you but is reluctant to suggest it because he doesn't know how your mother would feel about it. Since she is agreeable, by all means go ahead.

Confidential

TO WHAT'S WRONG WITH US: Not a thing. I think your friend has a vvivid imagination. Show me three children who grew up without a single argument and I'll show you three vegetables.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of The Review, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Crowd Attends Final Events Of 16th Fair At Hookstown

A large crowd attended the final events Saturday night at the 16th annual Hookstown Grange Fair.

In a highlight of the final day's program, a Washington (Pa.) man's teams won both the light weight and heavy weight horse pulling contests.

George Porter of Washington finished ahead of 13 other entries in the light weight contest. Dick Rudibaugh of Lisbon was second and Pete Wizard of Dundee, Ohio, was third.

In the afternoon heavy weight pulling match, Porter again finished first, with the Wellsville Feed Co.'s team second and Lester Kohl of Salineville, third. There were 11 entries.

The evening program started with a machinery parade led by Joe Bodrie, billed as "the fastest gun alive." He drove a 1962 model auto decorated with guns.

The livestock parade was led by James Swogger and Marilyn Soisson, 4-H king and queen. It showed some of the cattle on exhibit. The livestock event also included horses and ponies.

Miss Judy Kay Drotleff of Salem won first place in the talent show. Miss Janet Channels of East Liverpool was second and Miss Jenny Dingess, also of East Liverpool was third.

The contest attracted 16 entries. Judges were Mrs. Dale Currie of New Castle, Doris Singer Kokoski of Baden and Ronald Mercer of Burgettstown.

Akron Pair, Baby Die In Route 224 Collision

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP) — An Akron couple and their infant child were killed when a tractor-trailer went out of control on U.S. 224 about two miles west of Deerfield and overturned on their automobile Sunday night.

Killed were James W. Oosse, 31; his wife, Mildred Louise, 34; and their daughter, Janet, 2.

Portage County sheriff's deputies said the eastbound truck apparently skidded on the rain-wet pavement and mashed down on the westbound automobile. The truck was carrying a 27,000-pound cargo. Its driver was uninjured.

It was nearly three hours before the truck could be lifted and the bodies removed.

Portage County authorities said the truck driver, Clyde Grady, 44, of St. Louis, was being charged with involuntary manslaughter. A preliminary hearing was scheduled in Ravenna Municipal Court this morning.

Back To School Picnic At Chester Draws 500

About 500 attended the first "Back to School Picnic" of Chester VFW Post 6450 Sunday at Chester City Park.

About 48 prizes were awarded to children for various contests, including 50-yard dash, greased pig chase, peanut roll, sack race, softball throw, baseball throw, baton twirling, twist and jitterbug.

Judges for the dance contest were Patty May, Frances Trimble and Martha Gregus. The committee included William J. Maple, chairman, Jerrold Wilson, Richard Shingler and Sanford Graham.

The 50-pound pig was greased and released by Robert Finley. Food and refreshments were served.

Club's Outing Attracts 250

Addresses by Robert L. Mullins of Columbus, state insurance superintendent, and State Sen. Edmund Sargus of St. Clairsville highlighted the annual picnic of the East Liverpool Democratic Club Sunday at Lake Arrowhead in Columbiana. An estimated 250 attended.

Mullins, 31, youngest member of Gov. Mike DiSalle's cabinet, discussed the governor's legislative programs, including welfare, unemployment and mental health.

He declared the governor has "progressed at a terrific rate" in promoting his programs, and "in the next four years will make Ohio one of the top states in most of these programs."

Sen. Sargus cited "the need for a Democratic senate to help the governor realize his programs." He expressed the need for "unity" in the party for the Nov. 6 general election and also discussed opposition confronting the governor from the Senate.

Don Hancock, president, presided. Don Gosney, county chairman, introduced the speakers and a number of candidates in the fall election.

Jim Almon of Salem served a fried chicken dinner. He also announced that tickets now are on sale for a dinner honoring Gov. DiSalle Sept. 27 in Salem.

Races for children, held at past picnics, were postponed because of the warm weather. Winners of prizes were Kenneth Bell, Thomas Trevor, Yvette Bucher and John Sowards.

Jury Deadlock Ends Bluefield Police Trial

PRINCETON (AP) — The week-long breaking and entering trial of Bluefield Patrolman Ted R. Land has ended in a jury disagreement.

The Mercer County Criminal Court jury reported to Judge Howard M. Jarrett that it was hopelessly deadlocked in the 50-year-old policeman's case. Jurors said they were divided 11-1 but would not say which way the majority voted.

The case was continued to the October term of court. Land is charged with breaking and entering a Bluefield automobile agency in 1950.

He is one of seven officers charged in a series of thefts that started in 1946.

Ann Landers

ANSWERS YOUR PROBLEMS

Dear Ann Landers: My dear sister died two months ago in childbirth. It was her first child and her husband is filled with grief. He turned the baby over to me to raise and I intend to bring her up as if she were my own.

I am 35 years of age and have never married. The baby's father is a fine man and I know he is terribly lonely. We have had some long talks and without coming right out and asking, I'm pretty sure he would like to marry me. I would accept his proposal in a minute, but I'm afraid of what people might say.

Under the circumstances I'm sure my sister would approve. It would be wonderful for the baby, too, to grow up with her own father.

Please give me your thinking on this very important matter. I am going to take your advice. —LOUISVILLE WOMAN.

Dear Woman: A four-or five-month courtship period will tell you what you want to know. Never mind what anyone else says or thinks. If you two get along well together and wish to marry, go ahead.

-:-

Out Of Chains

Dear Ann: I'm 18, graduated from high school last June and went steady with Steve for three straight years. I know what you think of going steady and you are right, but I was too dumb to see it. Steve was the most attractive boy in school and I was plain-looking. I was scared to relax my grip for fear some girl would get him away.

After graduation he began to cool off. He seemed to go out of his way to start an argument. Finally he blew up and said, "Find someone else to haul you around. I feel like you've got me in chains!" That was the way our three-year romance ended.

Now I'm marooned. My telephone never rings, except for a few girl friends who want to know if I've killed myself yet. How can I get back into circulation? Where do I start? Please help me before I dry up and blow away.—FADING FAST.

Dear Fading: A girl who has worn an "Occupied" sign around ner heck for three years can hardly expect the fellows to beat her door down the minute she is available.

Be patient. The word will get around. And while you're waiting, it may be a good idea to have a little party and invite yourself a date.

Longs For Father

Dear Ann: My mother and father were divorced seven years ago. I'm 14 years old now and I remember my father well although I've seen him only once in all that time, and that was six years ago. He was a very good-looking man. My mother says that was the main part of the problem.

Lately my dad has been on my mind a lot. I dream of him often. In my dreams he is always sweet which is the way my mother says he was. I want to write him a letter and tell him I'd like to see him sometime. My mother says he knows where I am and if he wanted to see me he would have done so a long time ago.

He sends Mom support money every month so he knows our address. What is your advice? Mom says she will take your word as final. Should I write or not?—EDITH.

Dear Edith: If you'd like to drop your father a note I see no reason why you should not do so. It may well be that he would like to see you but is reluctant to suggest it because he doesn't know how your mother would feel about it. Since she is agreeable, by all means go ahead.

Confidential

TO WHAT'S WRONG WITH US: Not a thing. I think your friend has a vvivid imagination. Show me three children who grew up without a single argument and I'll show you three vegetables.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of The Review, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Crowd Attends Final Events Of 16th Fair At Hookstown

A large crowd attended the final events Saturday night at the 16th annual Hookstown Grange Fair.

In a highlight of the final day's program, a Washington (Pa.) man's teams won both the light weight and heavy weight horse pulling contests.

George Porter of Washington finished ahead of 13 other entries in the light weight contest. Dick Rudibaugh of Lisbon was second and Pete Wizard of Dundee, Ohio, was third.

In the afternoon heavy weight pulling match, Porter again finished first, with the Wellsville Feed Co.'s team second and Lester Kohl of Salineville, third. There were 11 entries.

The evening program started with a machinery parade led by Joe Bodrie, billed as "the fastest gun alive." He drove a 1962 model auto decorated with guns.

The livestock parade was led by James Swogger and Marilyn Soisson, 4-H king and queen. It showed some of the cattle on exhibit. The livestock event also included horses and ponies.

Miss Judy Kay Drotleff of Salem won first place in the talent show. Miss Janet Channels of East Liverpool was second and Miss Jenny Dingess, also of East Liverpool was third.

The contest attracted 16 entries. Judges were Mrs. Dale Currie of New Castle, Doris Singer Kokoski of Baden and Ronald Mercer of Burgettstown.

Akron Pair, Baby Die In Route 224 Collision

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP) — An Akron couple and their infant child were killed when a tractor-trailer went out of control on U.S. 224 about two miles west of Deerfield and overturned on their automobile Sunday night.

Killed were James W. Oosse, 31; his wife, Mildred Louise, 34; and their daughter, Janet, 2.

Portage County sheriff's deputies said the eastbound truck apparently skidded on the rain-wet pavement and mashed down on the westbound automobile. The truck was carrying a 27,000-pound cargo. Its driver was uninjured.

It was nearly three hours before the truck could be lifted and the bodies removed.

Portage County authorities said the truck driver, Clyde Grady, 44, of St. Louis, was being charged with involuntary manslaughter. A preliminary hearing was scheduled in Ravenna Municipal Court this morning.

Back To School Picnic At Chester Draws 500

About 500 attended the first "Back to School Picnic" of Chester VFW Post 6450 Sunday at Chester City Park.

About 48 prizes were awarded to children for various contests, including 50-yard dash, greased pig chase, peanut roll, sack race, softball throw, baseball throw, baton twirling, twist and jitterbug.

Judges for the dance contest were Patty May, Frances Trimble and Martha Gregus. The committee included William J. Maple, chairman, Jerrold Wilson, Richard Shingler and Sanford Graham.

The 50-pound pig was greased and released by Robert Finley. Food and refreshments were served.

Club's Outing Attracts 250

Addresses by Robert L. Mullins of Columbus, state insurance superintendent, and State Sen. Edmund Sargus of St. Clairsville highlighted the annual picnic of the East Liverpool Democratic Club Sunday at Lake Arrowhead in Columbiana. An estimated 250 attended.

Mullins, 31, youngest member of Gov. Mike DiSalle's cabinet, discussed the governor's legislative programs, including welfare, unemployment and mental health.

He declared the governor has "progressed at a terrific rate" in promoting his programs, and "in the next four years will make Ohio one of the top states in most of these programs."

Sen. Sargus cited "the need for a Democratic senate to help the governor realize his programs." He expressed the need for "unity" in the party for the Nov. 6 general election and also discussed opposition confronting the governor from the Senate.

Don Hancock, president, presided. Don Gosney, county chairman, introduced the speakers and a number of candidates in the fall election.

Jim Almon of Salem served a fried chicken dinner. He also announced that tickets now are on sale for a dinner honoring Gov. DiSalle Sept. 27 in Salem.

Races for children, held at past picnics, were postponed because of the warm weather. Winners of prizes were Kenneth Bell, Thomas Trevor, Yvette Bucher and John Sowards.

Jury Deadlock Ends Bluefield Police Trial

PRINCETON (AP) — The week-long breaking and entering trial of Bluefield Patrolman Ted R. Land has ended in a jury disagreement.

The Mercer County Criminal Court jury reported to Judge Howard M. Jarrett that it was hopelessly deadlocked in the 50-year-old policeman's case. Jurors said they were divided 11-1 but would not say which way the majority voted.

The case was continued to the October term of court. Land is charged with breaking and entering a Bluefield automobile agency in 1950.

He is one of seven officers charged in a series of thefts that started in 1946.

Twins' Kralick In Season's 5th No-Hitter, Stops A's 1-0

The Review Sports

MONDAY, AUGUST 27, 1962 EAST LIVERPOOL REVIEW PAGE 14

Allen, Battey Give Jack Shower

MINNESOTA TWINS' no-hit pitcher Sunday, Jack Kralick, seems to be surprised that the shower is wet as his teammates, Earl Battey (battery mate) left and Bernie Allen, who scored the winning run, treat Kralick to the traditional shower after the no-hitter. Kralick's almost perfect game was the first no-hitter for the old Senators-Twins since 1931. (UPI Telephoto)

Near Perfect Performance

'Plenty Satisfied,' Claims Kralick Following No-Hitter

By LEW FERGUSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) —You'd think a guy pitching a major league no-hitter would have all his pitches as well as a good amount of cunning and wile working for him.

But not Minnesota's Jack Kralick, the 26-year-old beanpole southpaw who edged the Kansas City Athletics and hardluck pitcher Bill Fischer 1-0 Sunday, barely missing a perfect game when he walked the second man up in the ninth inning.

Kralick found out in the first inning that his curve ball wouldn't break right. "I couldn't grip the ball right to throw my curve, so I told (catcher Earl) Battey about it."

Battey said he and Kralick "just worked around" having to use the curve after that.

Kralick relied on a hopping fast ball and a good slider "with just a couple of changeups tossed in" in fashioning the season's fifth no-hitter in the majors. He struck out three.

"No, I didn't try to get cute with any of the hitters," Kralick said. "This (Kansas City) is a real good hitting team; you don't fool hitters like that with cute stuff."

He lost pinch hitter George Alusik when a fast ball sailed high and outside on a 3-2 count in the ninth. This didn't particularly disturb Kralick after the game.

"Alusik usually hits me pretty good," he explained. "I figure as it turned out it was better for me to walk him than have him hit a good pitch. The pitch barely missed, that's all."

The fact he had come within one pitch of hurling a perfect game didn't bother Kralick either.

"It doesn't make any difference to me—a no-hitter or a perfect game," he said. "I suppose it's a little nicer to be a perfect game, but it really makes no difference to me. I'm plenty satisfied."

Collegians Top Mets 22 To Win Slow Pitch Title

The Collegians ruled the roost today in the Thompson Park Slow Pitch League after winning a four-game playoff Sunday to snare the championship.

The Collegians downed Mets 22, 10-5 in the final game after disposing of East End 25-8 in the first contest. Mets 22 reached the finals with a 14-12 victory over American Billiards.

Gene Nicholson was the winning pitcher in both games. Gus Garland was the big gun in the final game for the champs by slapping a three-run homer and going 3 for 3. Bill O'Neil also had a perfect 3 for 3 game.

In the victory over East End, Keith Bishop slammed two homers while Charlie Peck, Larry Logston and Jim Ketchum had one each for the Collegians. Pack hit two home runs for the losers while Daniels collected four hits and Jim Richardson three.

Bud Boley waas the winning pitcher for the Mets in their victory over the Billiards. Dick Nohe went 3 for 3 and Jack Bailey 3 for 4 to pace the winners. Keith Talbott, Jack Bair and Bob Johnson clubbed home runs for the Billiards.

Local Tennis Players Lose

All of East Liverpool's entries were eliminated in tennis tournaments at Salem and East Palestine over the weekend.

At East Palestine, Tom Trombold of East Palestine won over Tom Fannin, 6-0 and 6-0; John Garver of Youngstown defeated Joe Leigh, 6-0 and 6-0 and Joe DeCort of Salem downed Laurin Stacey 6-0 and 6-3.

Gary Liebschner won his first round match by default over Chick Welcher of Youngstown but lost to Karl Fleischer, 6-2 and 6-0.

In the Columbiana County tournament at Salem, Leigh lost to John Fieldhouse of East Palestine 6-1 and 6-4; Wayne Harris of Salem over Ron Jarvis 8-6 and 6-3; Phil Wenner of Lisbon over Liebschner 6-0 and 6-1 and Ray Rogers of Salem over Stacey 6-1 and 6-2.

Yesterday's Stars

BATTING—Orlando Cepeda, Giants—Drove in two runs with a double and his fourth home run in three games, and scored twice in the Giants fourth straight triumph, a 7-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

PITCHING — Jack Kralick, twins—Became the fifth pitcher in the majors to hurl a no-hit, no-run game this season, shutting out the Kansas City Athletics 1-0. The 27-year-old southpaw came within two outs of pitching a perfect game—a walk to pinch hitter George Alusik on a 3-2 count with one out in the ninth, marring his otherwise perfect performance.

Although chicken and turkey need to have their skin rubbed and goose do not.

'Few Good Points' Seen By Hedmon In Scrimmage

"There were a few good points but we have a lot of work to do," Bob Hedmond said after East Liverpool High's scrimmage with Louisville Saturday.

Louisville wound up outscoring the Potters in touchdowns 3-2. Tom Kraft ran 10 yards for one Potter touchdown while Earl Olmstead caught a seven-yard pass from Chuck Baker for another tally.

Hedmond wouldn't mention any names but had high praise for three sophomores during the 3-hour scrimmage session Saturday.

East Liverpool will scrimmage against Wellsville and Campbell Memorial Tuesday at 9:30.

Nonpareil Meeting Scheduled Tuesday

The Nonpareil Club will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the YMCA when the membership campaign for 1962-63 will be discussed. H. A. (Hap) Tullis, president, will preside.

Giovenco's Loft Wins 3 Places In Bird Race

Victor Giovenco's loft swept the first three places in the second young bird race of the season flown Sunday from Coshocton.

The winning bird covered the distance in 1 hour, 43 minutes and 19 seconds.

The next race will be Sunday from Newark.

Allen Gets 3 Hits, Scores Only Run; Yanks Fall

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

In this era of the lively ball, the whip-handled bat and every man a slugger, you'd think a no-hit game would be as rare as a tax cut.

But there have been five—count 'em, five—in major league baseball this year, the highest number since the dear, dead-ball days of 1917 when six were recorded.

Jack Kralick, a slim left-hander who has been toiling in near-hit pitchers Sunday in a 1-0 triumph over the Kansas City Athletics.

The 6-foot-1, 175-pound southpaw from Ohio was very nearly a perfect game pitcher. He missed his bid for that distinction when he walked pinch-hitter George Alusik with one out in the ninth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Robin Roberts continued his remarkabe comeback with a five-hit effort as Baltimore completed a five-game sweep over the New York Yankees, 2-1. That loss, the Yanks' sixth straight, coupled with Los Angeles' 4-0 decision over Chicago and Kralick's gem over the A's left the Angels and the Twins in a virtual tie for second place, three games behind New York. Cleveland whipped Boston twice, 10-5 and 4-0, and Detroit split with Washington, the Tigers winning the first game 5-3 and the Senators taking the second 5-2.

Kralick, 27 and in his third full big league season, gained no-hit status achieved earlier this year by Bo Belinsky of the Angels, Earl Wilson and Bill Monbouquette of the Red Sox and Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers. The Minnesota southpaw's masterpiece raised his record to 10-8 and was only his fourth complete game in 30 starts.

Minnesota scored its winning run when Bernie Allen singled for the third time in the game, moved to second on Zolio Versalles' bunt, took third on a sacrifice by Kralick and scored on Lenny Green's sacrifice fly to center.

Roberts, the former Phillies great who was dropped by the Yanks at the outset of the season, ran his record to 9-6 and beat New York for the second time. The 35-year-old right-hander gave up a homer to Tony Kubek in the second but red-hot Brooks Robinson nailed Whitey Ford (13-7) for a homer in the bottom of the inning and Jim Gentile untied it with a homer in the fourth. Robinson rapped out 12 hits in 19 at bats in the five-game series.

The Angels stayed one percentage point ahead of the Twins as Don Lee blanked the White Sox on eight hits and Lee Thomas led the Los Angeles batting attack. Thomas tripled in two runs off Frank Baumann, scored himself in the first, and singled in the other Angel run in the seventh.

Dodgers Rout Mets; Reds Drop 4½ Back

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

First inning: Maury Wills walked, stole second and scored on a single by Tommy Davis.

Third inning: Wills beat out an infield hit, stole second, reached third on Willie Davis' safe bunt and scored when Tommy Davis hit into a double play.

Sixth inning: Wills doubled home a run, stole third and scored on a single by Jim Gilliam.

Thus did Maury Wills, perhaps the greatest base stealer in modern baseball history, demonstrate once more his tremendous value to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

With the fleet-footed shortstop reaching base three times, stealing three bases and scoring three times, the Dodgers trounced the hapless New York Mets 16-5 Sunday to retain their National League lead of 2½ games over the San Francisco Giants.

Houston's Colts cooled off the red hot Cincinnati Reds 2-1 and 6-4. The twin loss dropped the third-place Reds 4½ games behind the Dodgers and two behind the Giants, who defeated Philadelphia 7-4.

The Chicago Cubs beat Milwaukee 4-1 and Pittsburgh split a doubleheader with St. Louis, winning the second game 7-6, after the Cards had taken the opener 6-5.

The Giants were outhit, 11-7, by Philadelphia, but five of their safeties were for extra bases and helped them win their fourth straight. Orlando Cepeda drove in two runs with his 30th homer, the fourth in three games. Felipe Alou also homered his 21st of the season.

Jack Sanford, with relief help from Mike McCormick and Bob Bolin, registered his 18th triumph. The loss was charged to Art Mahaffey, the Phils' 17-game winner.

Southpaw George Brunet pitched a five-hitter in the first game and veteran second baseman Johnny Temple drove in two runs that snapped a 4-4 tie in the second game to highlight Houston's double victory over the Reds.

Bill White hit a two-run homer off relief ace ElRoy Face in the eighth inning to give the Cards a come-from-behind 6-5 victory over the Pirates in the opener. White singled the Cards' potential tying run into scoring position with two out in the ninth of the nightcap but right-hander Jack Lamabe retired Ken Boyer to preserve the Pirates' 7-6 margin in the nightcap. Bob Skinner made that possible by hitting his 20th homer.

Dick Ellsworth pitched a six-hitter for the Cubs and snapped the 25-game hitting streak of Milwaukee's Hank Aaron. Home runs by Dick Bertell and Billy Williams were the Cubs' big blows.

Layne Starts Tonight For Pittsburgh

DETROIT (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Layne will be back in the driver's seat tonight when the Pittsburgh Steelers clash with Detroit in an exhibition game.

It will be Layne's first start of the season. He played in only two series of downs in Pittsburgh's two previous exhibition games against Chicago and Cleveland.

Three Steelers will miss the game because of injuries, rookie fullback Bob Ferguson, end Harlon Hill and tackle Ray Lemek.

The game was expected to attract 15,000. Pittsburgh and Detroit each have won one game and lost one in exhibition play.

67 Captures Honors In Riverview League

A 5 under 67 won Sunday's event in the Riverview Golf League at Negley.

The winning team included Rube Wotring, Paul Standley, Jack Woomer and John Weir.

Twins' Kralick In Season's 5th No-Hitter, Stops A's 1-0

MONDAY, AUGUST 27, 1962 EAST LIVERPOOL REVIEW PAGE 14

Allen, Battey Give Jack Shower

MINNESOTA TWINS' no-hit pitcher Sunday, Jack Kralick, seems to be surprised that the shower is wet as his teammates, Earl Battey (battery mate) left and Bernie Allen, who scored the winning run, treat Kralick to the traditional shower after the no-hitter. Kralick's almost perfect game was the first no-hitter for the old Senators-Twins since 1931. (UPI Telephoto)

Near Perfect Performance

'Plenty Satisfied,' Claims Kralick Following No-Hitter

By LEW FERGUSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) —You'd think a guy pitching a major league no-hitter would have all his pitches as well as a good amount of cunning and wile working for him.

But not Minnesota's Jack Kralick, the 26-year-old beanpole southpaw who edged the Kansas City Athletics and hardluck pitcher Bill Fischer 1-0 Sunday, barely missing a perfect game when he walked the second man up in the ninth inning.

Kralick found out in the first inning that his curve ball wouldn't break right. "I couldn't grip the ball right to throw my curve, so I told (catcher Earl) Battey about it."

Battey said he and Kralick "just worked around" having to use the curve after that.

Kralick relied on a hopping fast ball and a good slider "with just a couple of changeups tossed in" in fashioning the season's fifth no-hitter in the majors. He struck out three.

"No, I didn't try to get cute with any of the hitters," Kralick said. "This (Kansas City) is a real good hitting team; you don't fool hitters like that with cute stuff."

He lost pinch hitter George Alusik when a fast ball sailed high and outside on a 3-2 count in the ninth. This didn't particularly disturb Kralick after the game.

"Alusik usually hits me pretty good," he explained. "I figure as it turned out it was better for me to walk him than have him hit a good pitch. The pitch barely missed, that's all."

The fact he had come within one pitch of hurling a perfect game didn't bother Kralick either.

"It doesn't make any difference to me—a no-hitter or a perfect game," he said. "I suppose it's a little nicer to be a perfect game, but it really makes no difference to me. I'm plenty satisfied."

Collegians Top Mets 22 To Win Slow Pitch Title

The Collegians ruled the roost today in the Thompson Park Slow Pitch League after winning a four-game playoff Sunday to snare the championship.

The Collegians downed Mets 22, 10-5 in the final game after disposing of East End 25-8 in the first contest. Mets 22 reached the finals with a 14-12 victory over American Billiards.

Gene Nicholson was the winning pitcher in both games. Gus Garland was the big gun in the final game for the champs by slapping a three-run homer and going 3 for 3. Bill O'Neil also had a perfect 3 for 3 game.

In the victory over East End, Keith Bishop slammed two homers while Charlie Peck, Larry Logston and Jim Ketchum had one each for the Collegians. Pack hit two home runs for the losers while Daniels collected four hits and Jim Richardson three.

Bud Boley waas the winning pitcher for the Mets in their victory over the Billiards. Dick Nohe went 3 for 3 and Jack Bailey 3 for 4 to pace the winners. Keith Talbott, Jack Bair and Bob Johnson clubbed home runs for the Billiards.

Local Tennis Players Lose

All of East Liverpool's entries were eliminated in tennis tournaments at Salem and East Palestine over the weekend.

At East Palestine, Tom Trombold of East Palestine won over Tom Fannin, 6-0 and 6-0; John Garver of Youngstown defeated Joe Leigh, 6-0 and 6-0 and Joe DeCort of Salem downed Laurin Stacey 6-0 and 6-3.

Gary Liebschner won his first round match by default over Chick Welcher of Youngstown but lost to Karl Fleischer, 6-2 and 6-0.

In the Columbiana County tournament at Salem, Leigh lost to John Fieldhouse of East Palestine 6-1 and 6-4; Wayne Harris of Salem over Ron Jarvis 8-6 and 6-3; Phil Kenner of Lisbon over Liebschner 6-0 and 6-1 and Ray Rogers of Salem over Stacey 6-1 and 6-2.

Yesterday's Stars

BATTING—Orlando Cepeda, Giants—Drove in two runs with a double and his fourth home run in three games, and scored twice in the Giants fourth straight triumph, a 7-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

PITCHING — Jack Kralick, twins—Became the fifth pitcher in the majors to hurl a no-hit, no-run game this season, shutting out the Kansas City Athletics 1-0. The 27-year-old southpaw came within two outs of pitching a perfect game—a walk to pinch hitter George Alusik on a 3-2 count with one out in the ninth, marring his otherwise perfect performance.

Although chicken and turkey need to have their skin rubbed and goose do not.

'Few Good Points' Seen By Hedmon In Scrimmage

"There were a few good points but we have a lot of work to do," Bob Hedmond said after East Liverpool High's scrimmage with Louisville Saturday.

Louisville wound up outscoring the Potters in touchdowns 3-2. Tom Kraft ran 10 yards for one Potter touchdown while Earl Olmstead caught a seven-yard pass from Chuck Baker for another tally.

Hedmond wouldn't mention any names but had high praise for three sophomores during the 3-hour scrimmage session Saturday.

East Liverpool will scrimmage against Wellsville and Campbell Memorial Tuesday at 9:30.

Nonpareil Meeting Scheduled Tuesday

The Nonpareil Club will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the YMCA when the membership campaign for 1962-63 will be discussed. H. A. (Hap) Tullis, president, will preside.

The next race will be Sunday from Newark.

Allen Gets 3 Hits, Scores Only Run; Yanks Fall

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

In this era of the lively ball, the whip-handled bat and every man a slugger, you'd think a no-hit game would be as rare as a tax cut.

But there have been five—count 'em, five—in major league baseball this year, the highest number since the dear, dead-ball days of 1917 when six were recorded.

Jack Kralick, a slim left-hander who has been toiling in near-hit pitchers Sunday in a 1-0 triumph over the Kansas City Athletics.

The 6-foot-1, 175-pound southpaw from Ohio was very nearly a perfect game pitcher. He missed his bid for that distinction when he walked pinch-hitter George Alusik with one out in the ninth inning.

Elsewhere in the American League, Robin Roberts continued his remarkabe comeback with a five-hit effort as Baltimore completed a five-game sweep over the New York Yankees, 2-1. That loss, the Yanks' sixth straight, coupled with Los Angeles' 4-0 decision over Chicago and Kralick's gem over the A's left the Angels and the Twins in a virtual tie for second place, three games behind New York. Cleveland whipped Boston twice, 10-5 and 4-0, and Detroit split with Washington, the Tigers winning the first game 5-3 and the Senators taking the second 5-2.

Kralick, 27 and in his third full big league season, gained no-hit status achieved earlier this year by Bo Belinsky of the Angels, Earl Wilson and Bill Monbouquette of the Red Sox and Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers. The Minnesota southpaw's masterpiece raised his record to 10-8 and was only his fourth complete game in 30 starts.

Minnesota scored its winning run when Bernie Allen singled for the third time in the game, moved to second on Zolio Versalles' bunt, took third on a sacrifice by Kralick and scored on Lenny Green's sacrifice fly to center.

Roberts, the former Phillies great who was dropped by the Yanks at the outset of the season, ran his record to 9-6 and beat New York for the second time. The 35-year-old right-hander gave up a homer to Tony Kubek in the second but red-hot Brooks Robinson nailed Whitey Ford (13-7) for a homer in the bottom of the inning and Jim Gentile untied it with a homer in the fourth. Robinson rapped out 12 hits in 19 at bats in the five-game series.

The Angels stayed one percentage point ahead of the Twins as Don Lee blanked the White Sox on eight hits and Lee Thomas led the Los Angeles batting attack. Thomas tripled in two runs off Frank Baumann, scored himself in the first, and singled in the other Angel run in the seventh.

Dodgers Rout Mets; Reds Drop 4½ Back

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

First inning: Maury Wills walked, stole second and scored on a single by Tommy Davis.

Third inning: Wills beat out an infield hit, stole second, reached third on Willie Davis' safe bunt and scored when Tommy Davis hit into a double play.

Sixth inning: Wills doubled home a run, stole third and scored on a single by Jim Gilliam.

Thus did Maury Wills, perhaps the greatest base stealer in modern baseball history, demonstrate once more his tremendous value to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

With the fleet-footed shortstop reaching base three times, stealing three bases and scoring three times, the Dodgers trounced the hapless New York Mets 16-5 Sunday to retain their National League lead of 2½ games over the San Francisco Giants.

Houston's Colts cooled off the red hot Cincinnati Reds 2-1 and 6-4. The twin loss dropped the third-place Reds 4½ games behind the Dodgers and two behind the Giants, who defeated Philadelphia 7-4.

The Chicago Cubs beat Milwaukee 4-1 and Pittsburgh split a doubleheader with St. Louis, winning the second game 7-6, after the Cards had taken the opener 6-5.

The Giants were outhit, 11-7, by Philadelphia, but five of their safeties were for extra bases and helped them win their fourth straight. Orlando Cepeda drove in two runs with his 30th homer, the fourth in three games. Felipe Alou also homered his 21st of the season.

Jack Sanford, with relief help from Mike McCormick and Bob Bolin, registered his 18th triumph. The loss was charged to Art Mahaffey, the Phils' 17-game winner.

Southpaw George Brunet pitched a five-hitter in the first game and veteran second baseman Johnny Temple drove in two runs that snapped a 4-4 tie in the second game to highlight Houston's double victory over the Reds.

Bill White hit a two-run homer off relief ace ElRoy Face in the eighth inning to give the Cards a come-from-behind 6-5 victory over the Pirates in the opener. White singled the Cards' potential tying run into scoring position with two out in the ninth of the nightcap but right-hander Jack Lamabe retired Ken Boyer to preserve the Pirates' 7-6 margin in the nightcap. Bob Skinner made that possible by hitting his 20th homer.

Dick Ellsworth pitched a six-hitter for the Cubs and snapped the 25-game hitting streak of Milwaukee's Hank Aaron. Home runs by Dick Bertell and Billy Williams were the Cubs' big blows.

Layne Starts Tonight For Pittsburgh

DETROIT (AP) — Quarterback Bobby Layne will be back in the driver's seat tonight when the Pittsburgh Steelers clash with Detroit in an exhibition game.

It will be Layne's first start of the season. He played in only two series of downs in Pittsburgh's two previous exhibition games against Chicago and Cleveland.

Three Steelers will miss the game because of injuries, rookie fullback Bob Ferguson, end Harlon Hill and tackle Ray Lemek.

The game was expected to attract 15,000. Pittsburgh and Detroit each have won one game and lost one in exhibition play.

Wednesday's Trot Classic Will Draw 15

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP)—A colt and a filly were among the most frequently discussed trotters named for the 37th Hambletonian, harness racing foremost classic which will be renewed Wednesday.

Fifteen 3-year-old trotters drew post positions Sunday for the race which will have a purse value of $116,612, with $62,845 to the first horse winning two heats.

The draw left three favorites in a second tier with several long-shots receiving more enviable starting spots among 10 horses in the front tier.

Drivers, owners and trainers were in almost unanimous agreement the first of the mile heats will be a scramble with favorites from the rear trying to breach the forward wall of horses.

There appeared a strong possibility of separate victors in the first two heats, pushing the race into at least a third heat.

Emily's Pride won a three-heat Hambletonian in 1958, and it went to four heats in 1960. Harlan Dean captured the first two heats last year.

Sprite Rodney, a filly to be driven by 30-year-old Eddie Wheeler, was discussed as having the best chance of capturing the first two heats this time.

She stepped a mile in 2:00 2-5 at Vernon Downs earlier this month, the best time this season for any of the five fillies, nine colts and one gelding in the race. Given unofficial odds of 3-1, Sprite drew No. 5 position in the front tier.

Tom Eaton of Norwich, N.Y., co-owner of Sprite, said she "is a very fast starter. The horse behind her could easily slip through [illegible]nt tier as she leaves."

[illegible]o. 15 spot, behind Sprite, is A. C. Viking, a large, dark colt who was established the 5-2 favorite. Viking, owned by A. C. Peterson of West Hartford, Conn., has won 10 of 11 starts this year and $135,319 during his lifetime.

Sanders Russell, 62, Viking's driver, said he regretted the colt did not receive a better position "from which to show his talent."

"But considering the draw," he added, "the best I could have hoped for was to be behind a fast starter. And I must say that looks promising."

Other favorites in the real bank are Spry Rodney (4-1), being driven by Del Miller from No. 12 spot, and Impish (3-1), No. 13, driven by Frank Ervin. Also in the second tier are Nathaniel (7-1), No. 14, piloted by Harry Pownall Sr., and Lord Gordon (10-1). No. 11, driven by John Patterson.

Happy Newport (10-1), driven by veteran Del Cameron, drew the No. 1 post on the rail ahead of Lord Gordon. Worth Seein (5-1) is being driven by Stanley Dancer, last year's top money-winning harness man, from No. 7.

Given No. 2, 3 and 4 posts, respectively, were Dubble T., an Indiana colt with 50-1 odds driven by Jerry Landess; Varlo Hanover (30-1), piloted by Cameron's son, Warren and Oh You Kid (30-1), driven by Harry Burright.

MARTY KEOUGH STILL reaches for the base and barely makes it back to first as Norm Larker brings his gloved hand down on Keough's shoulder in the eighth inning of the first game with Houston Sunday at Cincinnati. The umpire—Augie Donatelli—called Keough safe. The Reds dropped a doubleheader to the Colts. (UPI Telephoto)

Houk Not Worried Yet After Birds Sweep Set

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Only when you're managing the New York Yankees could you lose six straight — five within 46 hours—and say"—I'm not worried about a thing."

But that's how Ralph Houk felt today after the Baltimore Orioles and Robin Roberts had hung a 2-1 defeat on his club and trimmed New York's American League lead to three games over Los Angeles and Minnesota.

The loss was the sixth straight for the Yanks and completed a series sweep for Baltimore. But Houk was unfazed by it all.

"We've got too good a club to start worrying yet," Houk said. "Things could be a lot worse."

If things could be worse for the Yankees, they couldn't be better for the Orioles. It'll take an American League pennant to match the tide of emotion the sweep produced among Baltimore players, officials and fans.

For Roberts (9-6) the victory was particularly sweet. It was the veteran right-hander's second win over the club that released him this spring before he ever threw a pitch in the American League.

The win lowered Robin's earned run average to 2.43, second best in the league. It was his 243rd major league victory, but the way he jumped and ran from the mound after it was all over, you'd have thought he was a rookie just starting out.

The sweep enabled the Orioles to take the season's series from New York 11-7. Over the last four years, the Birds have the best mark in the league against the Yanks, holding a 41-39 edge.

Baltimore pounded out 65 hits and scored 34 runs in the sweep. Jerry Adair collected 13 hits and Brooks Robinson 12. When Robinson hit a second inning homer off Whitey Ford Sunday, it was his 17th hit in 24 times at bat.

Little League Title Taken By San Jose

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP)—Observers in this home of Little League baseball were talking today about San Jose, Calif., winners of the 16th World Series, as possibly the greatest Little League team ever assembled.

The San Jose players won the title Saturday by beating Kankakee, Ill., 3-0. Ted Campbell, a 12-year-old pitcher who is 6-feet-1 and weighs 210 pounds on the official league scales, pitched a no-hitter in the final.

His teammates collected two unearned runs in the fourth inning, and shortstop Vaughn Takaha hit a home run over the center field fence in the fifth inning for the California runs.

Takaha also pitched a one-hitter over the Mexicans in the semifinal.

Electronic Brains 'Like' The Women

MOUNT BETHEL, N. J. (AP) — Electronic brains are no fools—they get along with women much better than with men.

That's the verdict of the Burroughs Corp. electronic components division here.

"We use women in preference to men," said general manager Saul Kuchinsky. Putting together minute parts under exacting standards takes manual dexterity and spatial perception, Kuchinsky explained. Many male workers have these, but women seem to have one thing extra: more patience.

The women are less easily irritated by working with tiny parts for computers. "We have determined this from experience," Kuchinsky said.

Wilson Leads Browns In Victory Over 49ers

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Johnny Unitas has found that old second-half magic that he used a few seasons back to spark Baltimore to a pair of National Football League titles, and the thought is enough to give the six other Western Conference coaches a good case of preseason heebie-jeebies.

The Colts' quarterback, injury free this year, has led the Colts to three straight exhibition victories. Last Saturday night, he put on one of his patented second-half clutch performances as the Colts pulled away to a 24-10 victory over the Dallas Cowboys (0-3) at Norfolk, Va. He passed for one TD and set up a second after the Colts had been held to a 3-3 halftime tie.

The Cleveland Browns and defending champion Green Bay Packers are the only other teams with perfect records. The Browns, with newcomer Tom Wilson leading the way, upended San Francisco (2-1) 34-27 at Portland, Ore., for their third straight win. At Milwaukee the Packers won their fourth exhibition game, and third against NFL foes, 35-21 over the Chicago Bears (0-3).

The New York Giants won their first in three starts, 31-24 over the Rams (2-1) at Los Angeles, Philadelphia (2-1) beat Washington (0-3) 24-7 at Charlotte, N.C., and the St. Louis Cards (1-1-1) edged the Minnesota Vikings (0-3) at Minneapolis, 24-21.

In an American League exhibition Sunday at Oakland, Calif., San Diego struggled to beat the Oakland Raiders 33-27.

Tonight, in Detroit, the Lions play host to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Unitas passed 11 yards to rookie fullback Bob Clemens for one second-half score and sneaked a yard for the second, setting it up with a 45-yard pass to Jimmy Orr. Lenny Lyles' 45-yard run with an interception of Eddie LeBaron's pass broke the tie in the third period before Unitas clinched it. Quarterback Don Meredith ran five yards for Dallas' only touchdown.

Wilson, acquired from the Rams and playing in place of sidelined Ernie Davis, scored twice and set up a third score as he racked up 109 yards in only eight carries. But the Browns' ever-leaky pass defense was raw meat for 49er quarterback John Brodie, who completed 23 of 33 passes for 262 yards and one touchdown, and set up two more with his aerials.

Green Bay's 1-2 punch of quarterback Bart Starr, who passed 43 yards to Max McGee and 18 to Lew Carpenter for scores, and fullback Jim Taylor, who scored two and rolled up 103 yards rushing in a second-half drive, are still the Packers' forte. The Bears, still unable to mount a consistent attack but strong on defense, held Taylor to only eight yards in the first half.

Youth, 14, Lives Normal Life With Bullet In Brain

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Donal Fligor Jr. has the usual teen-ager's ravenous appetite.

Don jokes a lot and looks forward to returning to his junior high school classes next month.

But Don gets dizzy sometimes and has a headache.

The 14-year-old youth has a .22-caliber bullet lodged in his brain.

Three week ago Don was given a one in four chance to live. He was accidentally shot in the left temple by a young friend, and doctors at Columbus Children's Hospital felt it was too risky to operate. The bullet is embedded four inches in his brain.

Don was kept packed in ice for 10 days. His body temperature was dropped from the normal 98.6 to 86 degrees to slow his circulation and reduce the pressure on the brain. Doctors believe scar tissue will built around the bullet and hold it in place.

The youth spent 16 days in the hospital and came home to Springfield a week ago Sunday.

"It's a miracle," says the boy's father. "Everytime they wheeled a body out you just sat and wondered if that was your son."

Don lost 15 pounds during the ordeal, but now "he eats all the time, not a lot at one time, but just all the time," according to his stepmother.

A frequent visitor is 14-year-old Jimmy Oppy who held the pistol when it went off. Jimmy was put in a detention home here for seven days following the shooting.

Don's father objected. "Even if Don had died I would never have wanted anything to have befallen that little boy," he said.

On Sept. 7 Don will have a thorough examination. The results will probably determine whether he can go back to school this fall and how much activity he can have.

'Sail-In' Restaurant Only One Of Its Kind

LAVALLETTE, N. J. (AP) — If you don't tip the waiter at the Quarterdeck Club he won't tell you to go jump in the lake — but he may throw you in himself.

The club is the latest fad — a floating restaurant on a barge anchored in Barnegat Bay. The sail-in eatery is the brainchild of William V. Scott, an ex-commercial fisherman and businessman. He bought an old railroad barge and spent the winter converting it.

"Boats are becoming as common as cars today," Scott explained. "There are lots of drive-ins to serve motorists, so I figured why not a sail-in restaurant? As far as I know, it's the only thing of its kind around."

Wednesday's Trot Classic Will Draw 15

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP)—A colt and a filly were among the most frequently discussed trotters named for the 37th Hambletonian, harness racing foremost classic which will be renewed Wednesday.

Fifteen 3-year-old trotters drew post positions Sunday for the race which will have a purse value of $116,612, with $62,845 to the first horse winning two heats.

The draw left three favorites in a second tier with several longshots receiving more enviable starting spots among 10 horses in the front tier.

Drivers, owners and trainers were in almost unanimous agreement the first of the mile heats will be a scramble with favorites from the rear trying to breach the forward wall of horses.

There appeared a strong possibility of separate victors in the first two heats, pushing the race into at least a third heat.

Emily's Pride won a three-heat Hambletonian in 1958, and it went to four heats in 1960. Harlan Dean captured the first two heats last year.

Sprite Rodney, a filly to be driven by 30-year-old Eddie Wheeler, was discussed as having the best chance of capturing the first two heats this time.

She stepped a mile in 2:00 2-5 at Vernon Downs earlier this month, the best time this season for any of the five fillies, nine colts and one gelding in the race. Given unofficial odds of 3-1, Sprite drew No. 5 position in the front tier.

Tom Eaton of Norwich, N.Y., co-owner of Sprite, said she "is a very fast starter. The horse behind her could easily slip through the front tier as she leaves."

No. 15 spot, behind Sprite, is A. C. Viking, a large, dark colt who was established the 5-2 favorite. Viking, owned by A. C. Peterson of West Hartford, Conn., has won 10 of 11 starts this year and $135,319 during his lifetime.

Sanders Russell, 62, Viking's driver, said he regretted the colt did not receive a better position "from which to show his talent."

"But considering the draw," he added, "the best I could have hoped for was to be behind a fast starter. And I must say that looks promising."

Other favorites in the real bank are Spry Rodney (4-1), being driven by Del Miller from No. 12 spot, and Impish (3-1), No. 13, driven by Frank Ervin. Also in the second tier are Nathaniel (7-1), No. 14, piloted by Harry Pownall Sr., and Lord Gordon (10-1). No. 11, driven by John Patterson.

Happy Newport (10-1), driven by veteran Del Cameron, drew the No. 1 post on the rail ahead of Lord Gordon. Worth Seein (5-1) is being driven by Stanley Dancer, last year's top money-winning harness man, from No. 7.

Given No. 2, 3 and 4 posts, respectively, were Dubble T., an Indiana colt with 50-1 odds driven by Jerry Landess; Varlo Hanover (30-1), piloted by Cameron's son, Warren and Oh You Kid (30-1), driven by Harry Burright.

Wilson Leads Browns In Victory Over 49ers

By JACK CLARY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Johnny Unitas has found that old second-half magic that he used a few seasons back to spark Baltimore to a pair of National Football League titles, and the thought is enough to give the six other Western Conference coaches a good case of preseason heebie-jeebies.

The Colts' quarterback, injury free this year, has led the Colts to three straight exhibition victories. Last Saturday night, he put on one of his patented second-half clutch performances as the Colts pulled away to a 24-10 victory over the Dallas Cowboys (0-3) at Norfolk, Va. He passed for one TD and set up a second after the Colts had been held to a 3-3 halftime tie.

The Cleveland Browns and defending champion Green Bay Packers are the only other teams with perfect records. The Browns, with newcomer Tom Wilson leading the way, upended San Francisco (2-1) 34-27 at Portland, Ore., for their third straight win. At Milwaukee the Packers won their fourth exhibition game, and third against NFL foes, 35-21 over the Chicago Bears (0-3).

The New York Giants won their first in three starts, 31-24 over the Rams (2-1) at Los Angeles, Philadelphia (2-1) beat Washington (0-3) 24-7 at Charlotte, N.C., and the St. Louis Cards (1-1-1) edged the Minnesota Vikings (0-3) at Minneapolis, 24-21.

In an American League exhibition Sunday at Oakland, Calif., San Diego struggled to beat the Oakland Raiders 33-27.

Tonight, in Detroit, the Lions play host to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Unitas passed 11 yards to rookie fullback Bob Clemens for one second-half score and sneaked a yard for the second, setting it up with a 45-yard pass to Jimmy Orr. Lenny Lyles' 45-yard run with an interception of Eddie LeBaron's pass broke the tie in the third period before Unitas clinched it. Quarterback Don Meredith ran five yards for Dallas' only touchdown.

Wilson, acquired from the Rams and playing in place of sidelined Ernie Davis, scored twice and set up a third score as he racked up 109 yards in only eight carries. But the Browns' ever-leaky pass defense was raw meat for 49er quarterback John Brodie, who completed 23 of 33 passes for 262 yards and one touchdown, and set up two more with his aerials.

Green Bay's 1-2 punch of quarterback Bart Starr, who passed 43 yards to Max McGee and 18 to Lew Carpenter for scores, and fullback Jim Taylor, who scored two and rolled up 103 yards rushing in a second-half drive, are still the Packers' forte. The Bears, still unable to mount a consistent attack but strong on defense, held Taylor to only eight yards in the first half.

'Sail-In' Restaurant Only One Of Its Kind

LAVALLETTE, N. J. (AP) — If you don't tip the waiter at the Quarterdeck Club he won't tell you to go jump in the lake — but he may throw you in himself.

The club is the latest fad — a floating restaurant on a barge anchored in Barnegat Bay. The sail-in eatery is the brainchild of William V. Scott, an ex-commercial fisherman and businessman. He bought an old railroad barge and spent the winter converting it.

"Boats are becoming as common as cars today," Scott explained. "There are lots of drive-ins to serve motorists, so I figured why not a sail-in restaurant? As far as I know, it's the only thing of its kind around."

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Joseph J. O'Neill, 66, last of three brothers who toured the vaudeville circuits as minstrels under the name Elkins, Fay and Elkins early in the century, died Sunday.

Houk Not Worried Yet After Birds Sweep Set

By GORDON BEARD
Associated Press Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Only when you're managing the New York Yankees could you lose six straight — five within 46 hours—and say"—I'm not worried about a thing."

But that's how Ralph Houk felt today after the Baltimore Orioles and Robin Roberts had hung a 2-1 defeat on his club and trimmed New York's American League lead to three games over Los Angeles and Minnesota.

The loss was the sixth straight for the Yanks and completed a series sweep for Baltimore. But Houk was unfazed by it all.

"We've got too good a club to start worrying yet," Houk said. "Things could be a lot worse."

If things could be worse for the Yankees, they couldn't be better for the Orioles. It'll take an American League pennant to match the tide of emotion the sweep produced among Baltimore players, officials and fans.

For Roberts (9-6) the victory was particularly sweet. It was the veteran right-hander's second win over the club that released him this spring before he ever threw a pitch in the American League.

The win lowered Robin's earned run average to 2.43, second best in the league. It was his 243rd major league victory, but the way he jumped and ran from the mound after it was all over, you'd have thought he was a rookie just starting out.

The sweep enabled the Orioles to take the season's series from New York 11-7. Over the last four years, the Birds have the best mark in the league against the Yanks, holding a 41-39 edge.

Baltimore pounded out 65 hits and scored 34 runs in the sweep. Jerry Adair collected 13 hits and Brooks Robinson 12. When Robinson hit a second inning homer off Whitey Ford Sunday, it was his 17th hit in 24 times at bat.

Little League Title Taken By San Jose

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP)—Observers in this home of Little League baseball were talking today about San Jose, Calif., winners of the 16th World Series, as possibly the greatest Little League team ever assembled.

The San Jose players won the title Saturday by beating Kankakee, Ill., 3-0. Ted Campbell, a 12-year-old pitcher who is 6-feet-1 and weighs 210 pounds on the official league scales, pitched a no-hitter in the final.

His teammates collected two unearned runs in the fourth inning, and shortstop Vaughn Takaha hit a home run over the center field fence in the fifth inning for the California runs.

Takaha also pitched a one-hitter over the Mexicans in the semifinal.

Electronic Brains 'Like' The Women

MOUNT BETHEL, N. J. (AP) — Electronic brains are no fools—they get along with women much better than with men.

That's the verdict of the Burroughs Corp. electronic components division here.

"We use women in preference to men," said general manager Saul Kuchinsky. Putting together minute parts under exacting standards takes manual dexterity and spatial perception, Kuchinsky explained. Many male workers have these, but women seem to have one thing extra: more patience.

The women are less easily irritated by working with tiny parts for computers. "We have determined this from experience," Kuchinsky said.

Out Of The Air

By ALAN GILL

A Distinct Sort Of Person

Fess Parker would like the pearly white cigarette holder to fool you, and the duded-up look about the lapels. He'll have you know that he's no longer the King of the Wild Frontier but the Mr. Smith who went to Washington instead.

Alan Gill

(His new series, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," is related distantly to the picture of the same name, and it will be seen Saturday nights on ABC, starting Sept. 29.)

His hair still fans over his brow like a withered chive plant, and his voice is still soft as a coonskin cap.

But Fess Parker — all 6 feet 5 inches of him — is a new man. He shows you the impressive clothier's signature on his jacket and says, "I may become a clothes horse before this thing is over."

-:-

PARKER PULLS his head in between his massive shoulders when he hears the name, Davy Crockett. It was an image carefully built up and now to be put carefully away in cold storage.

"With an image," he says, "well, you just can't kill it overnight. Unlss you have something to replace it with, you're wasting your time."

And: "A fellow doesn't worry about a television image. Television has matured a lot of players. Look at Jim Garner and Steve McQueen — big in movies. They matured and broke the image. If 'Mr. Smith' is successful, then the movie parts will come along, all right. I hope I'm a distinct sort of person, not somebody mistaken for Cary Grant."

-:-

HE REMEMBERS with horror the unearthly sound that went up from the tens of thousands of children at a fair in Fort Worth as Davy Crockett was introduced, and how the screech went through to the bones.

"Those kids," he says, "could put the Romans down one, two, three."

And he remembers his years with Disney: "Disney's mind was elsewhere when I was with him. The thing is, if you don't question Disney and do a good job, you'll do fine."

Parker feels right at home in the Mr. Smith part.

"I was down in Washington recently and met a bunch of senators and sort of apologized to them about playing one of them in the show. Sen. Pell of Rhode Island, he said, 'Shucks! You look more like a senator than I do!' "

-:-

THE AIM of the series is humor —sometimes broad humor.

Parker recounted one of the episodes which involved (a) such renowned figures as Jawaharlal Nehru, President Kennedy, Pierre Salinger, and — as a wax dummy standing in a doorway — Lyndon B. Johnson; (b) a case of mistaken identity between Harpo Marx and a French pianist named Pierre le Grand; (c) a piano duet, featuring Fess and Harpo, at a White House soiree.

If the story lacks finesse (and we won't know until we see it), it cannot be faulted for lack of daring.

The Bostonian inflections of J.F.K. will be heard in this and other episodes, and we'll be happy to know that the actor who speaks the President's lines is named Lenny Weinrib.

The wife of the mythical Sen. Eugene Smith will be played by Sandra Warner, a newcomer who "just came in from left field."

"Have you seen her?" Parker asked, wincing in his admiration. "They toned her down and she still comes out."

-:-

FESS PARKER doesn't wish to look too far into the future just now; he's busy. But he'd have given his eyeteeth for the Gregory Peck role in "To Kill a Mockingbird." (Parker ran for it but not fast enough.)

Car's Plunge Hurts Woman

An elderly woman motorist is in "fair" condition today at Rochester General Hospital with injuries suffered when her auto hit a service station sign and landed nose down in Wolfe's Run in Industry on Route 68 Sunday afternoon.

Mary P. McCune, 70, of Brilliant received a laceration of the chin and abrasions and contusions of the left leg, the hospital reported.

Police Chief Guy St. Esprit said the woman was on her way to visit a nephew in Beaver when the accident occurred about 2 p. m. According to his report, she stepped on the gas pedal instead of the brake as she came around a sharp curve.

Esprit said the car hit the iron pole of the station's sign, knocking the pole into the creek. He said the pole saved the auto from landing on its top.

The sharp curve and small bridge have been the scene of several other serious accidents, including at least one fatality.

Group Meets To Air Work On Shadyside

A committee for the improvement of the Shadyside Ave. area met with city councilmen and other city and township officials and County Commissioner Frank Wilson Saturday to discuss resurfacing and widening the avenue and installing a traffic light.

Charles Prince, chairman of the citizens' group, said the officials agreed to go along with the group's proposal if the price is right. The county commissioners will take it up with the county engineer to estimate the cost to be shared by the city and county, Prince said.

He said the county will inform the city of the cost and the committee then will be informed. The city would pay for that part within the city and the county for the part in Liverpool Township. The committee is concerned with the road from the intersection of W. 8th St. to Picken's Store. It was pointed out by the residents that a school bus travels the road twice a day and the road is too narrow for oncoming traffic to pass.

The citizens' group also is concerned with the need for a traffic light at the Route 7 intersection. Prince said there is only a blinker now about a half block away near Maloney's Store on W. 8th St.

Prince said he had talked to County Commissioner Galen Greenisen who could not attend the meeting but is in favor of the citizens' requests.

The officials and citizens met at the Route 7—Shadyside Ave. intersection. There about 12 on the citizens' committee.

Minor Damage Seen In Newell Area Crash

Damage was minor in a rear-end collision involving two cars Saturday afternoon at the West Virginia entrance to the Newell Bridge, Hancock County sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputies said a station wagon operated by Lawrence Murray, 21, of Owings Mills, Md., struck the rear of a 1955 sedan driven by Robert Cherrone, 37, of Export, Pa. Cherrone was halted in the north-bound lane. Neither driver was injured.

Out Of The Air

By ALAN GILL

A Distinct Sort Of Person

Fess Parker would like the pearly white cigarette holder to fool you, and the duded-up look about the lapels. He'll have you know that he's no longer the King of the Wild Frontier but the Mr. Smith who went to Washington instead.

Alan Gill

(His new series, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," is related distantly to the picture of the same name, and it will be seen Saturday nights on ABC, starting Sept. 29.)

His hair still fans over his brow like a withered chive plant, and his voice is still soft as a coonskin cap.

But Fess Parker — all 6 feet 5 inches of him — is a new man. He shows you the impressive clothier's signature on his jacket and says, "I may become a clothes horse before this thing is over."

-:-

PARKER PULLS his head in between his massive shoulders when he hears the name, Davy Crockett. It was an image carefully built up and now to be put carefully away in cold storage.

"With an image," he says, "well, you just can't kill it overnight. Unlss you have something to replace it with, you're wasting your time."

And: "A fellow doesn't worry about a television image. Television has matured a lot of players. Look at Jim Garner and Steve McQueen — big in movies. They matured and broke the image. If 'Mr. Smith' is successful, then the movie parts will come along, all right. I hope I'm a distinct sort of person, not somebody mistaken for Cary Grant."

-:-

HE REMEMBERS with horror the unearthly sound that went up from the tens of thousands of children at a fair in Fort Worth as Davy Crockett was introduced, and how the screech went through to the bones.

"Those kids," he says, "could put the Romans down one, two, three."

And he remembers his years with Disney: "Disney's mind was elsewhere when I was with him. The thing is, if you don't question Disney and do a good job, you'll do fine."

Parker feels right at home in the Mr. Smith part.

"I was down in Washington recently and met a bunch of senators and sort of apologized to them about playing one of them in the show. Sen. Pell of Rhode Island, he said, 'Shucks! You look more like a senator than I do!' "

-:-

THE AIM of the series is humor —sometimes broad humor.

Parker recounted one of the episodes which involved (a) such renowned figures as Jawaharlal Nehru, President Kennedy, Pierre Salinger, and — as a wax dummy standing in a doorway — Lyndon B. Johnson; (b) a case of mistaken identity between Harpo Marx and a French pianist named Pierre le Grand; (c) a piano duet, featuring Fess and Harpo, at a White House soiree.

If the story lacks finesse (and we won't know until we see it), it cannot be faulted for lack of daring.

The Bostonian inflections of J.F.K. will be heard in this and other episodes, and we'll be happy to know that the actor who speaks the President's lines is named Lenny Weinrib.

The wife of the mythical Sen. Eugene Smith will be played by Sandra Warner, a newcomer who "just came in from left field."

"Have you seen her?" Parker asked, wincing in his admiration. "They toned her down and she still comes out."

-:-

FESS PARKER doesn't wish to look too far into the future just now; he's busy. But he'd have given his eyeteeth for the Gregory Peck role in "To Kill a Mockingbird." (Parker ran for it but not fast enough.)

Know how to divide an egg when you are halving a recipe that calls for only one egg? Beat the egg lightly with a fork in a cup and then measure with a tablespoon.

Why Do Students Leave School?

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Why do students drop out of high school?

A study by the Dade County—Miami and environs — public schools discloses these primary reasons, in order of frequency:

1.—Not interested in school.

2.—Discouraged by lack of success.

3.—Excess of absence or truancy.

Three causes shared fourth place in the survey: entering verified employment, enlisted in the armed forces and marriage.

Next in order were "inability to adjust to school" and "needed at home".

The findings are based on the first year of a three-year survey, which is in its second year.

Every fifth 10th-grader, alphabetically, was chosen for the study last year.

There was another sampling of seventh - graders, but this study is concerned with "involuntary withdrawals" such as transfers.

Nearly 5,000 students are included in the two surveys.

Jonathan Gillingham, director of the dropout study, explained that officials are prying further into the causes. For example, why "not interested in school"?

The first year study showed that boys and girls were about even in giving the "not interested" reason. But boys outnumbered girls, 15 to 3, in discouragement by lack of success. Only girls were affected by marriages. Boys predominated in the "inability to adjust" category.

The guidance department takes over when a student drops out. Many, particularly married girls, are induced to attend adult school, including vocational and other courses.

But the dropout survey is a fact-finding project only and plans have not been formulated to follow through by helping students who leave school find jobs or make adjustments. A course of action will be determined after completion of the three-year study, Gillingham said.

Wisconsin Sets Five-Year Plan

By The Associated Press

Five years from now the University of Wisconsin expects 60 per cent of all its teacher-training students to be enrolled in a five-year program.

This is because of a Ford Foundation grant of $500,000 for a statewide expansion of the university's experimental program in the preparaion of teachers.

In the first four years, under the plan, the prospective teacher gets a strong liberal education and specializes in one subject field.

In the fifth year, he continues to study in his subject field and prepares for teaching through professional seminars and one semester's participation on a teaching team in a school.

This plan was started by a Foundation grant in 1959.

The new grant will assist Wisconsin in establishing the fifth-year internship plan as the principal method of preparing teachers in the state.

Thirty - three of Wisconsin's school systems have indicated they are willing to cooperate in the internship program.

Study Airs Schooling Of Men And Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau says women go to school longer than men, on the average, but more men complete four years of college.

The Census Bureau said its house-to-house canvas of 1960 showed that the median amount of schooling for women at that time was 10.9 years, compared with 10.3 years for men. However, 4.6 million men had completed college, compared with 3 million women.

The opposite of philanthropy is "misanthropy," which means hatred of mankind.

Detroit Helps 'Dropouts' To Obtain Work

While officials in other towns across the country are just now beginning to tackle the bulging youth unemployment problem, the big industrial city of Detroit is moving smoothly into its 13th year of helping find jobs for school dropouts.

Now a regular part of the public school program, the Job Upgrading Program has found work for more than 1,000 youngsters who couldn't get jobs on their own.

This new labor force, patiently trained, counseled and supervised by school guidance and vocational workers, hitherto has been the least employable. Youngsters in it come from poor economic and social backgrounds, their education has been inadequate and their general ability is low.

They don't even know how to start getting a job. They don't know how to fill out an application blank. They don't know their own assets, and where these assets would fit into paid employment, if at all.

So during the first six weeks of the Upgrading Program, these kinds of problems are attacked. The three-hour morning session is informal. Counseling is personal to groom the student for a job.

Part of each morning is given over to studying and filling out job sheets, of which there are 50.

Some of these are personal data sheets, including the student's biography and his own analysis of his personality. Some are fact sheets, giving information on the techniques of getting a job, what employers want, what kinds of jobs are available.

Coordinators at the Upgrading Centers, which counsel about 30 teen-agers at a time, get down to the details of what to wear, how to look and what to say on an interview.

The center provides a shoeshine box the boys can use at any time and a cosmetic table with fingernail polish and other cosmetics to which the girls may help themselves.

Practice interviews are held. Stimulus is provided by taking the group to visit industries, so that kinds of jobs for which they may eventually qualify become a reality. And for morale's sake, graduates of the Job Upgrading Center now employed come back for an occasional party.

At the beginning of the program, jobs were provided through subsidy by private social agencies in the city. Later, as the need grew, posts were found in city governmental agencies, like the parks and recreation department, the city garage and the city hospitals.

After a youngster gets his first job, a school representative visits him at work, advises him on any problems he has and talks with his job supervisor.

When he attains the goal of demonstrated ability to hold a full-time job and has accumulated at least six months' satisfactory work experience he is on his own.

Family Countdown

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A California family traveling through Arizona took a nose count and came up one child short. They backtracked 12 miles and found one of their five children waiting at a service station where the family had stopped earlier.

Counselors Are Needed In Guidance Programs

Guidance programs in the nation's schools are faced with a two-headed dilemma — finding counselors despite an ever-present shortage of trained personnel.

Suffering from this supply-and-demand problem are thousands of youngsters whose work may slip behind because they lack individual help in getting at the root of their problems.

Where guidance programs in the past were confined mainly to high schools, principals today are requesting this help for elementary school children—if they only can find it.

Nationwide, there is a current shortage of 25,000 to 35,000 guidance counselors.

In some school systems, one guidance counselor handles the vocational, personal and academic problems of more than 1,200 students. He's lucky if he can see each student once a year.

In other systems, the guidance counselor is handed chores that no one else has time for: arranging assembly programs, representing the school at state meetings, serving on social agency panels.

If no clerical help is available, the counselor is beside himself filling out college forms, recording grades in each student's folder and giving tests which he probably has to score himself.

But where school superintendents and boards of education have insisted on a full-fledged guidance program, the results have paid tremendous dividends in cutting down on dropouts, helping students find and get into appropriate colleges and guiding students toward vocational goals.

Most Children Find Fun In Baking

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When the day comes that your school children — ages probably from 8 to 12 — decide it would be fascinating to learn to bake, don't turn them down or shoo them out of the kitchen.

They'll need your simple, unaggressive supervision during their first efforts. But before you know it, they may be turning out quick breads, cakes and cookies to carry in their lunch boxes or to have for after-school snacks.

From the first, you and your boys and girls should agree upon a few rules.

They must understand clearly that they may not turn on the surface units or oven of the range unless you are in the kitchen or they have your permission to do so. They must know exactly what you want them to do about clean-up after baking, and how you want them to do it.

YOU MUST also make boys and girls aware of how to handle hot baked foods with sturdy pot holders. Ask your youngsters to watch you when you remove quick breads or cakes from the oven. Show them how you handle a pot holder, how you pull out an oven rack before removing a pan of food, how you place the pan on a suitable surface. Show them how to loosen the edges of the bread or cake with a small spatula, how to turn it out on a wire rack and use another wire rack to turn it right side up again.

Show them how you remove a cookie pan from the oven and place it on a clear, wide, heat-proof surface so that there's no danger of an elbow bumping into the edge of the hot pan. Show them how to hold the pan with the pot holder and to use a wide spatula to remove the cookies to a wire rack to cool.

To assure your children's baking success — to say nothing of your own — have on hand at least one nested set of measuring cups (1 cup, ½ cup, 1-3 cup and ¼-cup) and measuring spoons (1 tablespoon, 1 teaspoon, ½ teaspoon, ¼ teaspoon).

Youngsters always enjoy sifting flour! Show them how to dump the flour into a sifter on a large sheet of paper, how to spoon the flour lightly into the measuring cup (or fraction of a cup) until it overflows, and then how to draw a spatula across the top to level it.

TELL THEM granulated sugar may be spooned into a measure and leveled. But brown sugar must be packed down tightly with a spoon (or clean fingers) as it is added to the measure until there is a level top. When the brown sugar is turned out of the measure, it should hold its shape.

Measuring baking powder, baking soda, salt and spices also should be demonstrated. When it comes to greasing baking pans, children always enjoy doing this task with a pastry brush dipped in melted fat.

Show them that if they grease a measure before adding molasses or corn syrup, the sticky stuff will not stick to the measure. It's safe to use this method in any baked product in which shortening or other fat is one of the ingredients in the recipe.

To a youngster, half the enjoyment in baking is using equipment. And there's no reason why a boy or girl can't become adept with a rotary (hand or electric) beater, an organge and lemon squeezer, a rotary - type gadget for chopping nuts, a regular food chopper.

When your youngsters start learning to bake, make it your business to do some job of your own in the kitchen so you can be close at hand. But don't hover or direct!

Your youngsters should feel free to ask you about a procedure, or to help them out. They should also have a pleasant knowledge that you trust them to do the job to the best of their ability. Before children become proficient at any task, they need encouragement rather than censure.

COLORFUL CLIPS of brightly-colored fabric dress up this school jumper. Accompanying it is a blouse-slip, guaranteed to stay in place during even the most strenuous school day.

3 Sisters In 60s Overstay Their Visit

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Three sisters in their 60s overstayed their visit to Vizcaya, the Dade County Museum, and had to climb a five-foot wall to get off the grounds.

"Beautiful place, though," explained Mrs. Ralph Von Suboff, 62, of Grant, Fla., Miss Wanda Karsh, 61, of Brooklyn and Mrs. Tom Tannehill, 63, of Barberton Ohio.

"Next time we'll go earlier."

Not Sorry For Self, But Poor Andrew

SARASOTA, Fal. — Ash Wing, his nap interrupted, told a woman caller no Andrew lived at his home and she must have the wrong number.

"Wrong number nothing," snapped the caller, "you answered the wrong phone, that's all. Now hang up!"

Wing gladly hung up. "And I didn't feel sorry for myself," he said. "But, Andrew, poor Andrew."

White Angora Cat Has Mind Of Own

WELLINGTON, Kan. (AP) — Tommy, a white Angora cat, has a mind of his own.

He ran up a tree at his home to escape a dog. He refused all appeals to come down and spent all night and part of the next day in the tree.

His owners finally called the fire department for help.

Most Children Find Fun In Baking

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When the day comes that your school children — ages probably from 8 to 12 — decide it would be fascinating to learn to bake, don't turn them down or shoo them out of the kitchen.

They'll need your simple, unaggressive supervision during their first efforts. But before you know it, they may be turning out quick breads, cakes and cookies to carry in their lunch boxes or to have for after-school snacks.

From the first, you and your boys and girls should agree upon a few rules.

They must understand clearly that they may not turn on the surface units or oven of the range unless you are in the kitchen or they have your permission to do so. They must know exactly what you want them to do about clean-up after baking, and how you want them to do it.

YOU MUST also make boys and girls aware of how to handle hot baked foods with sturdy pot holders. Ask your youngsters to watch you when you remove quick breads or cakes from the oven. Show them how you handle a pot holder, how you pull out an oven rack before removing a pan of food, how you place the pan on a suitable surface. Show them how to loosen the edges of the bread or cake with a small spatula, how to turn it out on a wire rack and use another wire rack to turn it right side up again.

Show them how you remove a cookie pan from the oven and place it on a clear, wide, heat-proof surface so that there's no danger of an elbow bumping into the edge of the hot pan. Show them how to hold the pan with the pot holder and to use a wide spatula to remove the cookies to a wire rack to cool.

To assure your children's baking success — to say nothing of your own — have on hand at least one nested set of measuring cups (1 cup, ½ cup, 1-3 cup and ¼-cup) and measuring spoons (1 tablespoon, 1 teaspoon, ½ teaspoon, ¼ teaspoon).

Youngsters always enjoy sifting flour! Show them how to dump the flour into a sifter on a large sheet of paper, how to spoon the flour lightly into the measuring cup (or fraction of a cup) until it overflows, and then how to draw a spatula across the top to level it.

TELL THEM granulated sugar may be spooned into a measure and leveled. But brown sugar must be packed down tightly with a spoon (or clean fingers) as it is added to the measure until there is a level top. When the brown sugar is turned out of the measure, it should hold its shape.

Measuring baking powder, baking soda, salt and spices also should be demonstrated. When it comes to greasing baking pans, children always enjoy doing this task with a pastry brush dipped in melted fat.

Show them that if they grease a measure before adding molasses or corn syrup, the sticky stuff will not stick to the measure. It's safe to use this method in any baked product in which shortening or other fat is one of the ingredients in the recipe.

To a youngster, half the enjoyment in baking is using equipment. And there's no reason why a boy or girl can't become adept with a rotary (hand or electric) beater, an organge and lemon squeezer, a rotary - type gadget for chopping nuts, a regular food chopper.

When your youngsters start learning to bake, make it your business to do some job of your own in the kitchen so you can be close at hand. But don't hover or direct!

Your youngsters should feel free to ask you about a procedure, or to help them out. They should also have a pleasant knowledge that you trust them to do the job to the best of their ability. Before children become proficient at any task, they need encouragement rather than censure.

3 Sisters In 60s Overstay Their Visit

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Three sisters in their 60s overstayed their visit to Vizcaya, the Dade County Museum, and had to climb a five-foot wall to get off the grounds.

"Beautiful place, though," explained Mrs. Ralph Von Suboff, 62, of Grant, Fla., Miss Wanda Karsh, 61, of Brooklyn and Mrs. Tom Tannehill, 63, of Barberton Ohio.

"Next time we'll go earlier."

West Virginia Program Tackles Dropout Problem

PRINCETON, W. Va. (AP) — West Virginia, already beset by troubles aplenty, faces a further economic drain caused by an estimated 30,000 boys and girls 16 and 17 years old who have failed to finish high school.

The state legislature ventured into the dropout dilemma early this year by providing for a compulsory, one-county job preparation program for unemployed 16 and 17-year-old male dropouts.

The act represents a pilot undertaking. Results will guide future legislatures of this and probably other states.

State School Supt. Rex M. Smith and a special advisory committee selected Mercer County, in West Virginia's extreme southeastern tip, for the experimental undertaking in June, July and August of this year.

James B. Deck, the program's fatherly director who has spent 34 of his 56 years in education, said that he was never forced, in preliminary interviews, to tell boys they were required to go back to the classroom.

"They all were eager," Deck related. "Most of them were just waiting and needed only to be asked." This contrasted with school records, which showed that most of the youths showed little or no interest before quitting.

The apparent general acceptance among Mercer's youth of the experimental plan well might have stemmed from Deck's approach. After a simple explanation of the program, he asked the boys, "What would you like to work at?"

"If we provided transportation, tools and teachers" (which the new law stipulates), Deck continued, "Would you be willing to try to learn this job?" The answer invariably was yes.

Courses taught included such things as welding, electrical work and building trades and depended largely on the interest shown by the approximately 150 boys in the program.

The basic objective of the program was to give the dropouts sufficient training to enable them to become gainfully employed.

But instruction also had overtones stressing mathematics and urging the youths to return to school and to get their high school diplomas.

"You want to be able to figure how much lumber is needed for a job," Deck told a 16-year-old who wants to be a carpenter like his father.

School officials want to know why dropouts occur in the first place. Case histories begun on the boys in the training program give some insight into why they left school.

Many said their trouble was reading.

That stemmed from such things as too much absence in the early grades and lack of interest on the part of parents.

Deck found that Mercer County's dropout problem did not exist in just one economic class. He visited boys in drafty cabins where families live in poverty and boys of comfortably situated families.

"Most of them were at home, just waiting," Deck said, "because there was nothing else for them to do."

10 Psychiatrists Aid Students At Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University has 10 physchiatrists on its staff.

Why?

"It is not because we have a sick population, but because of the sensible attitude of the administration here," says Dr. Preston Munter, assistant director of the University Health Service.

"They feel that young adults are at a particularly turbulent time of life and that a psychiatrist can help them and also facilitate learning."

Vincent Ross is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the state house of representatives. His law partner, William R. Buge, is seeking the Democratic nomination for the same office.

Cincinnati Takes Stock Of Results In TV Teaching

CINCINNATI (AP) — Television teaching hasn't enabled Cincinnati to cut down on the number of teachers it needs, according to a research study of TV teaching made here.

"However," says Wendell Pierce, superintendent of city schools, "we view television as a plus value in the classroom.

"Looking at the furure of education and the vast amount of knowledge to be acquired, mechanical devices will have to be used if we are going to have quality education."

Pierce said the study nailed down three ways classroom TV can help teachers:

1.—In some science classes, chiefly biology and chemistry, it gives the student a better view of demonstration experiments.

2.—It can show classes things not readily available — like an atomic airplane.

3.—TV can help show teachers how to do a better job and how to develop certain skills in instruction.

The research started in 1956 to compare TV-taught pupils with those given regular classroom instruction in science courses and driver training.

Analysis showed a few surprises. Pierce said:

"The older pupils at higher grade levels and the most capable ones at all grade levels did better in the TV classes — but they preferred conventional instruction.

"Younger pupils and less capable ones in all grades liked television, but they achieved more in regular classes."

Pierce said television teaching was most effective in classes where pupils were grouped by ability and had telecasts designed expressly for them.

He noted however, "Pupils generally preferred to listen than to participate when questions were asked by the television teacher during the telecast. The most capable students strongly preferred inactive viewing."

Pierce said pupils from TV-taught classes recalled about the same amount of subject matter as those from conventional classes when tested two years later.

Some Colleges Now Look Beyond Students' Marks

By The Associated Press

Admissions officers at some of the country's most popular colleges are taking a new, cool look at numerical scores on school tests and college entrance exams.

According to Eugene S. Wilson, admissions director of Amherst College, Amherst, Mass., "placement decisions are for the most part no longer controlled by marks" in the most sought-after institutions.

But he points out that the less popular institutions continue to choose students on the basis of high scores, because these colleges feel such a student body will give it prestige.

At Amherst, Wilson and his staff dig behind the prospective student's scoreboard to find out from the applicant himself what his talents are and how he has used them, how voracious a reader he is, what he has read, what he's curious to learn, what he has done with his summers.

"Nine out of 10 applicants will say they couldn't get summer jobs. But the 10th will say, 'I couldn't get a regular job, so some friends and I started a car-washing service, and I put $600 in the bank.' You notice that boy. You scratch yourself a note on his application, 'Watch this one'."

The Amherst dean believes tests of all kinds are highly overrated. Because tests are important to most teachers, "students are continually exposed to this frightening procedure".

Percentiles and scores have too long been in the driver's seat. The school's reputation, the principal's prestige and the teacher's success are all measured by the students' scores. "If we can just raise that student's verbal by 50 points, we're in good shape," he quotes one principal as saying.

Wilson feels tests measure merely the facts the teacher has taught, not necessarily the ability of the student to think.

Instead of asking students what they had learned at the end of a course, he would ask them what their questions were. "Unless a student wants to know more about a subject, he has gotten nothing from the course."

Holding up another sacred cow for anatomical examination, Wilson lashes out at today's emphasis on covering prescribed material.

"The teacher can't have interrupting questions, because the question may not be related to that particular chapter in the book. If a teacher dares defy the idol of coverage, he's likely to be hauled over the coals by his principal, demanding to know why he's failed to cover the ground. Intellectual curiosity begins to be stifled right there in the school room."

A curious student, says Wilson, can help himself to education. "You don't have to go to Harvard to take a course with Arthur Schlesinger. Everything he has said is in print. You can read it for yourself."

The outspoken dean comforts himself with the fact that some educators are willing to scrap traditional methods in favor of letting the individual explore independently.

The ungraded high school is one revolution, he says. At the college level, the lecture method is on the decline in some instances. Less listening, more discussion and exploration of ideas gives Wilson hope for education's qualitative improvement.

Miss Substitute's Head Bloody, But Unbowed

By A Substitute Teacher

The first time the principal phoned me to take over a teacherless class, I responded with zeal and enthusiasm.

I couldn't wait to get to school and begin imparting knowledge to an eager band of third graders, who would sit in wonder at my feet while I stimulated their inquiring little minds.

How I would do this, I didn't really know. But I assumed that due to smooth functioning of today's educational machinery, I would find lesson plans in the top desk drawer, a class schedule posted on the bulletin board and a roomful of helpful children willing to guide me if at any point I faltered.

SIX HOURS later, I was wondering if it were possible for 8-year-olds to manipulate an adult to their own somewhat demoniacal ends.

My bright-eyed students were smooth operators. When I explained a fine point of the arithmetic lesson, they assured me they had not been taught that way. "Miss So-and-So always said this," was a refrain I was to hear all day with appalling regularity.

Only Miss So-and-So, their regular teacher, knew how to teach. I didn't. I could not deviate from the book. I could not inject my own ideas. They obviously were barely tolerating me till the day was over and I would, they hoped, be gone forever.

The lesson plans were in the top drawer. But there was no register of the students' names. There was no schedule of periods. When I queried the class of what came when, I inadvertently created a furious storm. They all argued at once.

"No, no, we have our show-and-tell time first," one contingent shouted.

"No, no, we start with our new words," raged the rebuttal.

I did the only thing possible. I told them I didn't care what they or Miss So-and-So did, showed or told. I would teach them — in my own way, and for better or worse, they'd take it.

But they still had the bit in their teeth. When a bell rang at 11:40, they dropped their books, lined up at the door and marched off to lunch, without a by-your-leave from me.

By 2 o'clock, with pains crawling down the back of my neck and a hand that shook when it held a pencil, I nevertheless felt I was at last leading my class, not following it. They permitted me to gabble on about contagion and disease, even if I strayed from the book. In the driver's seat at last, I exulted.

—:—

THE DOOR opened, and a strange man walked in and sat down next to me, saying not a word. Should I stop teaching and acknowledge his presence? Was he some sort of supervisor sent in to witness my inadequacy?

I chose to ignore him, and regaled the class with stories of Rocky Mountain fever and other interesting folklore.

Suddenly he leaned over and hissed at me, "Be sure to let them out at 2:40 to get their buses," and walked out.

He need not have counseled me. Promptly at 2:35 my little clock-watchers rushed to their lockers, dived into their snowsuits, buttoned their boots, and evacuated, with cries of "Do you ride on C-49 or J-11 today?"

I lingered on for a moment in the peaceful stillness, thinking the principal would come in to thank me, or that some official would acknowledge my presence. Nobody came. The staff was evacuating too.

At the office, the secretary told me to sign the register without even looking at me. "You'll get paid next week."

My day of agony netted me exactly $11.64.

But did I learn my lesson and throw in the sponge? No, I'm still a substitute teacher, determined to prove I know as much as — and maybe a little more than — Miss So and So.

Coordinators Cut Turnover

DENVER (AP) — Looking for a way to beat the teacher turnover, a special agony for school boards across the country?

Then take a look at this city's flourishing teacher coordinator program, which can be modified to fit any school's needs.

Fifty-two coordinators work with an average of 600 new teachers each year, in the classroom, in individual conferences and in group meetings of the newest faculty members.

The coordinators, teachers with an average of 12 years' classroom experience, help the novices come to grips with basic problems like lesson planning, instruction problems and matters of child psychology.

They demonstrate effective ways to teach, either in group sessions or right in the classroom.

Says Dr. Arthur Olson of Denver's Division of Instructional Services: "The coordinator program has been a splendid success. It has helped stabilize our faculty and cut down on teacher turnover. It has been of tremendous importance in our recruitment of new teachers from outside the state. Also, it has relieved the school principal of much responsibility."

Coordinators, each of whom is assigned an average of 30 new teachers, work at the teaching levels with which they themselves are familiar.

A probationary teacher is assured of a once-a-week conference with her coordinator, along with opportunity to attend workshops with other new teachers. The program also has been extended to include second- and third - year teachers.

Dr. Olson emphasizes that coordinators do not have any role in teacher appraisal. If they did, the rapport needed for a profitable relationship would be destroyed.

Among the coordinator's functions are these:

1.—Helping organize the teacher's work in presession planning so that a successful beginning is made with classes.

2.—Assisting with preparation of daily lesson plans.

3.—Observing teachers and pupils working together in the classroom.

4.—Conferring with teachers about instructional problems, pointing out strengths and making constructive suggestions for overcoming weaknesses.

5.—Showing ways to individualize instruction and improve student motivation.

6.—Helping to construct classroom tests or to select standardized tests, and helping to use these tests effectively.

There is no shortage of coordinators, who are screened and selected from a large reservoir of applicants.

On the average, the coordinator is compensated by a bonus salary of about $600 over his regular pay scale. Coordinators serve in that capacity indefinitely, barring promotion to executive jobs.

Nation's Schools Called Upon To Tackle Problem

By The Associated Press

The country's schools are in dire need of an electric shock treatment to jar them into tackling anew their educational problems.

This is the opinion of Dr. William H. Bristow, director of New York City's Bureau of Curriculum Research, who constantly devises new tactics for his own school system or stirs up educational excitement at academic meetings across the country.

Here are some of his suggestions:

1.—To beat the constant teacher shortage, make teacher training a continuous part of the school's job, handled within the school day. Have experienced teachers work with student teachers to improve their skills before the first job.

2.—To make full use of the gifted, try something similar to the British system of subsidizing bright youngsters and their families.

3.—To counteract the stark figures of youth unemployment, use more imagination in work-experience programs in schools. If the problem is too much for the school to handle solo, why not have business and the government step in to help with expenses. It will pay both agencies in the long run.

4.—To train youngsters not capable of attacking the work in a vocational or technical high school, devise school programs to prepare them for jobs they can handle well.

5.—To help the emotionally disturbed, whose numbers are growing, tool up all school services, particularly guidance, to help them. ("Special classes and special schools," says the educator, "leave out more children than they catch. There are more gifted and more retarded in regular classes than in special schools.

How Much Will College Cost You?

By G. K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

How much does it cost to go to college? The only safe answer to that question is, "More than you think."

The talk these days is about rising tuition costs. Hardly a week goes by but some college or university announces that tuition is to be increased anywhere from $40 to $100 a semester.

But the cost of college is like an iceberg — most of its bulk is hidden. At best, tuition cost can only give you an idea of what your total college expenses will be.

—:—

CONSIDER A detailed study made a few years ago at the University of Illinois:

More than 700 students submitted detailed day-by-day records of their expenses for one semester. The tuition plus required fees averaged $140, but the total expenses averaged $872.

The survey showed these other average expenditures: $410 for room and board, $87 for personal and medical care, $78 for recreation, $61 for transportation, $44 for supplies and $52 for miscellaneous items.

The survey also emphasized another fact of college life: even at a low-tuition state university, the average student spent $872 per semester, or $1,744 per year.

About one out of four managed to keep his expenses to about $600 per semester, or $1,200 per year. At the other end of the scale, one out of four spent more than $945 per semester, or $1,890 per year.

—:—

THESE COSTS zoom at a prestige private college or university, where tuition alone is more than $1,500 per year. And they drop if the student attends a public institution in his own home town.

How much does it cost to go to college? Part of the answer may be found in another question: "How much do you want to spend?"

A student who lives at home and attends a public college or university may skimp by on $600-$700 a year. Another may travel across the continent to attend an expensive private school, drive his own car, carry on an extensive social life and find his expenditures totalling more than $4,000 a year.

Where does the money come from? The Illinois survey showed that the 700 students received about equal amounts from these three main sources: (1) earnings from employment, scholarships, GI Bill benefits, grants-in-aid; (2) assistance from parents, relatives or friends; and (3) liquidation of assets, savings, and loans.

The situation would vary, of course, from college to college, state to state, and even student to student.

EVEN THE most expensive universities have scholarship funds to help worthy and needy students from low-income families. Some students may have virtually all their college expenses paid for them in this way.

Many states have scholarship programs, as do service clubs, civic organizations, parent-teacher associations, etc.

Another major factor that determines how much a college education will cost is the amount of on-campus work a student is willing and able to do.

At some state universities, more than 20 per cent of the students are working their way completely through college, with no help from parents, loans, scholarships or friends.

This is getting an education the hard way, because a working student misses much that is important if he has no time for concerts, plays or other extra-curricular activities. But it can be done.

THERE ARE excellent materials available which college-bound students and their parents might do well to study in considering the cost of higher education. A few of them include:

"The New American Guide to Colleges," by Gene R. Hawes, published by The New American Library and available in paperback at most newsstands for 75 cents. It lists all colleges, junior colleges and universities in the United States, outlines their programs, general costs (tuition, room, board, required fees, etc.) and financial help available.

"Lovejoy's College Guide," a complete reference guide to the country's 2,356 colleges and universities, published by Simon & Shuster and available in most bookstores for $3.50, paperbound.

The New American Guide to Scholarships, Fellowships & Loans," by John Bradley, published by the New American Library and available at most newsstands for 75 cents in paperback. It gives details on more than $400 million available annually to college students (some of the scholarships are for less than $75, others cover virtually all college costs). It also explains how to apply for financial assistance.

"Need a Lift?" published by the American Legion and distributed free of charge to all youngsters—not just the children of veterans.

"Facing Facts About College Costs," prepared by the Prudential Insurance Co. and available without charge, by writing to Box 36, Educational Department, Prudential Insurance Co. of America, Newark 1, N. J.

Coeducation Gets OK Of Socialists

VIENNA (AP) — Coeducation is here to stay, the Austrian Socialist Party, junior members of the Conservative - Socialist coalition government say.

In an announcement by their press office, the Socialists rejected suggestion by the Catholic Family League to abolish coeducation introduced in Austria after World War II.

The Socialists hold a number of high education posts under the two-party system, among them the president of the Vienna Board of Education. The education ministry is held by a Conservative, on the other hand.

The press office said a separation of the sexes in school is not possible as there are not enough schools in small towns and villages.

Then it added: "There are more pros than contras for coeducation. Boys will lose their roughness to a certain degree through the influence of girls.

"On the other hand the tendency of girls to over-shyness will develop less strongly.

"Many pedagogues are pointing out that it is natural for boys and girls to grow up together. The best example is family life.

"Finally, there still is another important advantage of coeducation: erotic tensions between the sexes in the years of puberty are considerably reduced by coeducation."

On-Campus Housing Demands Rise Fast

NEW YORK (AP) — The demand for on-campus housing is increasing even faster than the enrollment at American colleges and universities, the Educational Facilities Laboratories says.

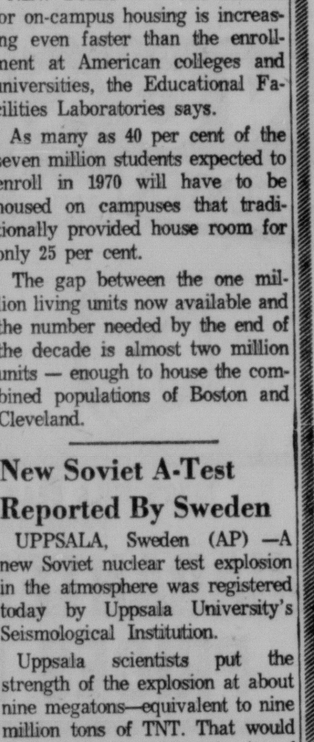
As many as 40 per cent of the seven million students expected to enroll in 1970 will have to be housed on campuses that traditionally provided house room for only 25 per cent.

The gap between the one million living units now available and the number needed by the end of the decade is almost two million units — enough to house the combined populations of Boston and Cleveland.

New Soviet A-Test Reported By Sweden

UPPSALA, Sweden (AP) —A new Soviet nuclear test explosion in the atmosphere was registered today by Uppsala University's Seismological Institution.

Uppsala scientists put the strength of the explosion at about nine megatons—equivalent to nine million tons of TNT. That would make it the No. 3 blast in size of the five explosions set off in the current Soviet series.



IN FAIR WEATHER or foul, the all-purpose galecoat is a boon to the college student, particularly if he chooses a striking pattern like this one. The coat is water repellent, but doesn't look it, and enjoys sunshine as much as a downpour.

A Real Storm

SAN JOSE, Ill. (AP) — A group of boys wanted to preserve specimens of a July hailstorm the size of baseballs and put them in a refrigerator. But they were unable to do so. The storm tore down power lines and the refrigerator stopped.

Tennessee has fewer marriages per capita than any other state.

Here's Preview Of Campus Styles

What new clothes will go around in the campus big wheel circle this fall?

Lots of reversible coats, plaid on one side, plain on the other. All - weather coats — it's passe to call them raincoats — of waterproof woolens. Length will be an inch to an inch and half shorter than last year, for both guys and gals.

Hoods are very big, on jackets which come just below the hip line. Wool stretch fabric is popular for slacks. The girls are borrowing the panchos which come to college with the men.

And speaking of the coed, she will be seen in clan plaids and full pleated skirts now that the manufacturers have a new and better process for permanent pleating.

She'll wear a lot of overblouses. When the overblouse is part of a versatile three - piece suit, it's apt to be wool jersey.

Ideas Offered On Need Of Guidance For Child

By The Associated Press

Parents who periodically live in a gray No Man's Land of indecision wondering whether their child's strange behavior is just a passing phase or the sign of deep-down disturbance will take heart from criteria laid down by the Child Study Association in New York.

Experts there have come up with helpful guidelines as to when children need special help with emotional disturbances.

They suggest first a calm, considered look at the child's whole adjustment pattern before becoming panicky over one untoward incident.

If, for instance, a child suddenly refuses to go to school, a little patient analysis is called for. Has he always worried about school, or is this a new reaction? Can his present reaction be caused by a new teacher, a new friction, some stress and strain you and the teacher can uncover?

—:—

IF IN YOUR parental delving into the child's personality, you recognize that every new experience has worried your child, that he moves from one area of trouble into another one, professional help is undoubtedly needed.

But if the current adjustment is not in keeping with your child's usual way of operating, watchful waiting is called for while you try to uncover the cause of his discontent.

How long to wait?

The Child Study professionals submit five test questions to help a puzzled parent decide:

1.—Is his present behavior consistent with his personality?

For example, you recognize that a youngster may persecute his small sister because he's jealous of her. This, too, will pass. But if your child carries resentments and dissatisfactions into all areas of his young life, you'll want to get professional help to assist him out of his confusion.

2.—Is his behavior consistent with his age?

Take a look at his contemporaries and see whether he is emotionally similar. If he seems to be using methods more childish than his age bracket, look for assistance.

3.—Can you find a specific difficulty in his present environment that's causing the problem?

If you can, you don't need to worry about continuing problems.

4.—Has there been a revolutionary change in his behavior?

Knowing your child, you recognize how you expect him to react. Is he reacting consistently with his nature, or doing an abrupt about-face? If the latter, go for help.

5.—How long has this problem been bothering him?

After having left no stone unturned to get at the root of the trouble, and you find the child's disturbance persists, it's sensible to seek help.

First stop might well be the family physician or the pediatrician who has had his share of child psychology.

Youth leaders who see your child in special situations may throw some light on his reactions. Self-help in the form of your own readings on child care and behavior problems, or your participation in parent discussion groups can broaden your understanding.

If after making these efforts, you feel special help is still needed, the Family Service Agency is a likely possibility, geared as it is to counseling on all phases of family trouble.

There also may be a guidance center in your city or county, or a travelling mental health clinic that makes periodic visits to your home community. To find out if these and other services are available, contact your state department of health, or the local chapter of the National Association for Mental Health.

Whether the problem requires little more than a few helpful tips on how to handle it or calls for long-term assistance of a more psychiatric nature, you can be assured that the services of one or more agencies are available to you.

BULKY SWEATERS hit a new pace on college campuses this a broad two-toned band at the waist for good fit. She couples it fall. The young bicyclist chooses a tweedy-looking mohair, with with tapered knit slacks for easy riding—or later loafing.

This High School Builds In Line With 'Blueprint'

By The Associated Press

A high school that dares to be different has broken loose from the traditional method of teaching standard subjects in 40-minute packages.

Instead, at Ridgewood High School in the Chicago suburb, Norridge, they've substituted giant-sized pieces of learning in two major categories: humanities and science.

The conventional departments of English, history and the like are totally absent. Creators of the flexible curriculum are trying to teach the interrelationship of various areas of knowledge, not the subject per se.

Equally flexible is the class day. Students spend about 40 per cent of their time daily in large groups, numbering up to 125, for example, in a humanities enrichment lecture.

Thirty per cent of the time is spent in seminars, in which 15 students plus a teacher sit around a big discussion table for, as often as not, student-led exploration into some of the ideas presented at the lecture.

Thirty per cent of the student's time is spent in study, which may be book work undertaken in individual study booths, continuation of a science project at the student's own pace or a chance to listen to taped musical compositions.

To avoid breaking into a student's individual explorations, study periods may run as long as two hours. Labs and physical education classes run for an hour and seminars are usually 40 minutes long.

The curriculum is planned for the pupils, so each has opportunity to develop his basic skills, knowledge and appreciations to the highest possible level.

Teachers actually teach only half their time, spend the rest on their professional activities plus counseling with individual students.

The administrative staff doesn't stay aloof from teaching either. Supt. Eugene Howard says he teaches English somewhere in the school twice each week, "so I can evaluate what we're doing".

Because knowledge is not doled out in regulation-size sections, the special skills of faculty members can be used in various ways. A music teacher may move into an ancient history class to lecture on Egyptian music, playing recordings as illustration.

The building itself was designed for the dynamic curriculum it would contain. There are no study halls, no conventionally organized classrooms, no bells.

Goal of all concerned with Ridgewood's student body is to see that the student takes over more and more responsibility for his own education, rather than being passively at the receiving end of a pipeline of information.

The program at Ridgewood is the closest thing to a working model of a blueprint for high schools developed by what is now called the Committee on Staff Utilization.

This Ford Foundation - financed agency of the National Association of Secondary School Principals made its recommendations after four years of experiments in some 100 schools.

Arizona Bares Need Of Classroom Space

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — University of Arizona officials say classroom space has become a major headache and give these examples:

Russian classes are conducted in the College of Mines Building, history classes in the Engineering Building and home economics in the Biological Sciences Building.

Can You Recall Your Graduation Address

CIRCLEVEILLE, Ohio (AP)—This probably - typical American community has provided what probably is typical reaction to the commencement address.

Less than six months after the 1961 high school commencement exercises, a survey was taken of a large cross-section of the graduating class. Two questions were asked:

What was the name of the speaker?

What did he say?

None of those questioned could remember the speaker's name. Only one had a vague idea of what he had said. One girl recalled something about "how we would appreciate our parents later in life."

The man who spoke, Dr. Harold L. Yochum, president of Capital University in Columbus, wasn't the least surprised.

He said he could not recall the name of the gentleman who spoke at his high school commencement, nor anything that was said.

But the university president defended graduation speeches just the same. Having a commencement exercise without an address, he said, "would be like getting married by proxy".

Parents who periodically live in a gray No Man's Land of indecision wondering whether their child's strange behavior is just a passing phase or the sign of deep-down disturbance will take heart from criteria laid down by the Child Study Association in New York.

Experts there have come up with helpful guidelines as to when children need special help with emotional disturbances.

They suggest first a calm, considered look at the child's whole adjustment pattern before becoming panicky over one untoward incident.

If, for instance, a child suddenly refuses to go to school, a little patient analysis is called for. Has he always worried about school, or is this a new reaction? Can his present reaction be caused by a new teacher, a new friction, some stress and strain you and the teacher can uncover?

—:—

IF IN YOUR parental delving into the child's personality, you recognize that every new experience has worried your child, that he moves from one area of trouble into another one, professional help is undoubtedly needed.

But if the current adjustment is not in keeping with your child's usual way of operating, watchful waiting is called for while you try to uncover the cause of his discontent.

How long to wait?

The Child Study professionals submit five test questions to help a puzzled parent decide:

1.—Is his present behavior consistent with his personality?

For example, you recognize that a youngster may persecute his small sister because he's jealous of her. This, too, will pass. But if your child carries resentments and dissatisfactions into all areas of his young life, you'll want to get professional help to assist him out of his confusion.

2.—Is his behavior consistent with his age?

Take a look at his contemporaries and see whether he is emotionally similar. If he seems to be using methods more childish than his age bracket, look for assistance.

3.—Can you find a specific difficulty in his present environment that's causing the problem?

If you can, you don't need to worry about continuing problems.

4.—Has there been a revolutionary change in his behavior?

Knowing your child, you recognize how you expect him to react. Is he reacting consistently with his nature, or doing an abrupt about-face? If the latter, go for help.

5.—How long has this problem been bothering him?

After having left no stone unturned to get at the root of the trouble, and you find the child's disturbance persists, it's sensible to seek help.

First stop might well be the family physician or the pediatrician who has had his share of child psychology.

Youth leaders who see your child in special situations may throw some light on his reactions. Self-help in the form of your own readings on child care and behavior problems, or your participation in parent discussion groups can broaden your understanding.

If after making these efforts, you feel special help is still needed, the Family Service Agency is a likely possibility, geared as it is to counseling on all phases of family trouble.

There also may be a guidance center in your city or county, or a travelling mental health clinic that makes periodic visits to your home community. To find out if these and other services are available, contact your state department of health, or the local chapter of the National Association for Mental Health.

Whether the problem requires little more than a few helpful tips on how to handle it or calls for long-term assistance of a more psychiatric nature, you can be assured that the services of one or more agencies are available to you.

This High School Builds In Line With 'Blueprint'

By The Associated Press

A high school that dares to be different has broken loose from the traditional method of teaching standard subjects in 40-minute packages.

Instead, at Ridgewood High School in the Chicago suburb, Norridge, they've substituted giant-sized pieces of learning in two major categories: humanities and science.

The conventional departments of English, history and the like are totally absent. Creators of the flexible curriculum are trying to teach the interrelationship of various areas of knowledge, not the subject per se.

Equally flexible is the class day. Students spend about 40 per cent of their time daily in large groups, numbering up to 125, for example, in a humanities enrichment lecture.

Thirty per cent of the time is spent in seminars, in which 15 students plus a teacher sit around a big discussion table for, as often as not, student-led exploration into some of the ideas presented at the lecture.

Thirty per cent of the student's time is spent in study, which may be book work undertaken in individual study booths, continuation of a science project at the student's own pace or a chance to listen to taped musical compositions.

To avoid breaking into a student's individual explorations, study periods may run as long as two hours. Labs and physical education classes run for an hour and seminars are usually 40 minutes long.

The curriculum is planned for the pupils, so each has opportunity to develop his basic skills, knowledge and appreciations to the highest possible level.

Teachers actually teach only half their time, spend the rest on their professional activities plus counseling with individual students.

The administrative staff doesn't stay aloof from teaching either. Supt. Eugene Howard says he teaches English somewhere in the school twice each week, "so I can evaluate what we're doing".

Because knowledge is not doled out in regulation-size sections, the special skills of faculty members can be used in various ways. A music teacher may move into an ancient history class to lecture on Egyptian music, playing recordings as illustration.

The building itself was designed for the dynamic curriculum it would contain. There are no study halls, no conventionally organized classrooms, no bells.

Goal of all concerned with Ridgewood's student body is to see that the student takes over more and more responsibility for his own education, rather than being passively at the receiving end of a pipeline of information.

The program at Ridgewood is the closest thing to a working model of a blueprint for high schools developed by what is now called the Committee on Staff Utilization.

This Ford Foundation - financed agency of the National Association of Secondary School Principals made its recommendations after four years of experiments in some 100 schools.

Arizona Bares Need Of Classroom Space

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — University of Arizona officials say classroom space has become a major headache and give these examples:

Russian classes are conducted in the College of Mines Building, history classes in the Engineering Building and home economics in the Biological Sciences Building.

Can You Recall Your Graduation Address

CIRCLEVEILLE, Ohio (AP)—This probably - typical American community has provided what probably is typical reaction to the commencement address.

Less than six months after the 1961 high school commencement exercises, a survey was taken of a large cross-section of the graduating class. Two questions were asked:

What was the name of the speaker?

What did he say?

None of those questioned could remember the speaker's name. Only one had a vague idea of what he had said. One girl recalled something about "how we would appreciate our parents later in life."

The man who spoke, Dr. Harold L. Yochum, president of Capital University in Columbus, wasn't the least surprised.

He said he could not recall the name of the gentleman who spoke at his high school commencement, nor anything that was said.

But the university president defended graduation speeches just the same. Having a commencement exercise without an address, he said, "would be like getting married by proxy".

How Much Homework Should A Child Have?

By The Associated Press

The national demand for more rigor in education, has put the bright spotlight of public attention on homework.

Generally, the demands have been for more and harder homework, particularly in the early grades.

Many educators warn, however, that there is a point of diminishing returns in heaping on out-of-class assignments, especially the type that emphasizes drill on things already learned in class.

A grade school pupil, for instance, may develop a passionate dislike for arithmetic if he has to do 30 to 50 problems a night, merely repeating things he already knows well.

Another problem was noted by the Educational Policies Commission, which includes many of the nation's top educators:

"Homework usually implies a home. But some pupils live in circumstances which do not merit that name. For them, little good can come from assignments which cannot be satisfactorily completed without a home library, seclusion, time for uninterrupted study, or parent interest and cooperation.

The "home library" needn't be extensive, and the seclusion needn't be absolute. But, where the home environment is not conducive to effective study, the pupil not only fails to gain anything from homework, he may soon fall so far behind the rest of the class that he becomes frustrated and eager to leave school.

Robert S. Fox, director of the University of Michigan University School, says the sixth grade is early enough for children to start assigned homework.

Many might disagree with him on this point, but most authorities go along with his statement that assignments should be tailored to fit the individual child wherever possible.

"Teachers should encourage children to explore their special interests on their own initiative," Fox said. "Elementary school children have such heavy demands on their time that, by and large, it's wise for the school to restrict its formal learning activities, like arithmetic or word drill, to the school hours.

"Light homework can be given in the sixth grade, and the amount can be increased through junior high school and senior high school."

Most educators agree that the best type of homework is that which broadens a child's interest. It is here that the parents play a vital role by encouraging a child to read, by stimulating his interest with trips to the zoo or museum, and particularly by showing that they place a high value on academic learning.

There is no general pattern of homework, even in the nation's high schools.

Some high schools require up to three hours a night of homework, others require an hour or less. Homework demands aren't likely to be heavy, for instance, in a rural area where the students have many chores to do at home.

Another facet of the homework problem is the work load it imposes on a teacher.

Most teachers agree that high school English students should write at least one theme a week. But suppose the English teacher has 150 students in five classes of 30 students each day.

If he devotes just 10 minutes to reading, correcting and grading each theme, it adds 25 hours a week to an already heavy work schedule.

And unless the homework can be read, corrected and graded, and returned to the student, there is often no use at all in assigning it.

Celebration Gets Unexpected Support

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — A popular fund drive to aid the West Virginia centennial celebration has received one bit of unexpected support.

A prisoner in the State Penitentiary here sent Gov. W. W. Barron $10 to help centennial planners.

Officials said the unnamed convict, serving a term for breaking and entering, probably won't be out in time to participate in the Mountain State's 100th birthday celebration next year.

Dairy Record

FARMVILLE, Va. (AP) — Green Creek Ideal Patsy, a 9-year-old registered Holstein cow owned by R. L. Agee Jr., has produced a record 17,293 pounds of milk and 570 pounds of butterfat in 365 days. Virginia Polytechnic Institute supervised the weighing and testing of production as a part of its official breed improvement program.

Girls' Dresses Made With Mother In Mind

By The Associated Press

Dresses for school wear, cut with imagination and designed with distinction are on the fashion agenda this fall.

Some are so planned that busy little girls can go on to piano lessons or dancing class in the same dress, if they choose. Others, in this fall's popular olive and gray shades, may see two days' wear at school.

Anticipating the busy life a school child leads from the time she catches the school bus till the dismissal bell, many cotton dresses are one piece for neatness, but two piece in effect.

Boleros are not separate, but are carefully stitched down. Jumper blouses are as likely to be attached as to be separate. Spotless white dickies look removable, but aren't.

Neatness is the first reason for keeping school clothes one piece. But secondarily is the indisputable fact, as mothers already know, that it's as easy to wash and iron the entire dress as to submerge the dickie separately.

Designers have gone all out to add bright trimming to dresses of solid color or subdued pattern. They've put colored borders on plaids, on irridescent solids, on plain dresses.

With the skillful use of rick rack, school dresses take on a sampler look. Or rick rack more sedately outlines a white vestee. Embroidered panels may be found on either the front or the back of a shirtwaist dress.

Bright and block plaids are super-imposed on monotone plaids, and dashes of color are provided solid-color dresses by weaving wool through the cotton fabric and then cutting and fringing the ends.

The pleated cummerbund, in either matching or contrasting color, is an interesting substitute for the usual belt. Dresses for little girls, however, are as likely to have a fine, back-tying bow.

Where in previous years, designers of little girls' dresses concentrated mainly on the basic rainbow colors, this year's crop has instituted all kinds of innovations. Lilac, shocking pink, chartreuse, and tangerine add distinction to even the most simply cut shirtmaker.

Start the fall with some of these cottons, add a sweater when days become crisper, and the schoolbound miss will fare brilliantly in her new wardrobe.

This School Tries To Fill Its Students' Total Needs

NEW YORK — Make a high school program flexible, and see that each student has work to fit his needs, and you'll find that even an overcrowded high school, with facilities strained to the limit, can be a peaceful place.

Such is the educational philosophy of Henry T. Hillson, principal of George Washington High School, where any number of roadblocks could prevent this philosophy from being carried out.

The school is badly overcrowded: nearly 6,000 pupils in a building designed for 3,000. School operates on four shifts.

IQs run all over the range, from 60 to 170.

Students come from 50 different countries, many with no knowledge of English.

The students homes may be overcrowded slums, or well-kept apartments in middle-class Riverdale, at the top of Manhattan.

But by concentrated counseling, and the willingness to build in new courses where they're needed, the massive student body gets an education plus a respect for the system that provides it.

Eleven educational counselors work with individual students on what courses to take and when. Students with marks over 90 do advanced work in Alpha classes or take extra subjects like journalism and public speaking. Non-English-speaking students take double periods in the language in small groups.

All participate in an extensive health education program, which goes beyond basketball to calisthenics and physical fitness. Modern dance classes, eight of them, know no academic or language barrier.

Nothing is static at George Washington. Recently, Hillson added some vocational courses in merchandising and "slow" stenography — half-speed stenography for those who can't work as fast as the usual class.

The principal and his two college advisers turn hand springs to get scholarships for the deserving.

This year, a boy is at Dartmouth College on a full, four-year scholarship, supposedly the largest the college has ever given. The recipient knew no English when he came to this country from Greece six years ago, but became an honor student at George Washington.

Personal problems, many of which are acute, are handled by the school's six deans, with the aid of a school psychologist where needed. The problem may be finding an acceptable home for a child whose father has deserted or helping a youngster through severe emotional disturbance because of parental warfare.

Controls, of course, are necessary, in a school jammed to the rafters. The overcrowded cafeteria can become a trouble spot. Hillson counts heavily there not only on teachers but on student monitors.

Two teachers are in charge of attendance. With a student body coming in at different hours all through the morning, checking attendance is a must. Another teacher tries to instil responsibility in those who forever come late.

But, says Hillson with pride, acts of vandalism are virtually unknown. No one even scribbles on the walls. George Washington, Hillson hopes, has a "tone" and the student body tries to maintain it.

Lawn Mowing May Be Revolutionized

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — A Bradenton man informed neighbors of a scheme he devised which may revolutionize the lawn mowing industry.

The happy schemer places cocktail glass holders used for lawn parties at intervals around his yard, then places an iced drink in each.

He says the cocktail stakes are placed so that as he rides around on the power mower, he is never without refreshment.

Customs Officer's Kindness Pays Off

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Kindness to newly arrived Cuban refugee children has won U.S. Customs Officer Henry Palacios official commendation and a $200 award from the Treasury Department.

Palacios, who makes a habit of keeping candy and chewing gum on hand for the little refugees he sees through customs, was cited for promoting goodwill for the Customs Service and the United States.

Institutes Bring Welcome Change

By The Associated Press

One group of high school principals and teachers will face the educational headaches this fall refreshed in spirit and recharged in enthusiasm after a summer spent delving into the humanities.

The happy breakaway from their ordinary chores comes by courtesy of the John Hay Fellows Program, which set up these summer institutes "with a view to enriching teaching and stimulating creative, imaginative contributions to American education".

Seventy public school administrators and 170 public senior high school teachers discussed philosophy, listened to concerts, brushed up on their knowledge of architecture, talked in groups and thought in private on four college campuses — Bennington, Williams, Colorado and the University of Oregon.

The dividends paid by this unusual kind of prepaid summer are enormous.

One administrator said, "The Institute had kindled in me the desire to read other modern novels, it has made me haunt secondhand book stores and it has caused me to neglect my garden, as I now choose a Sunday in an art gallery instead of with weeds and fertilizer."

Another commented, "I am pressing for changes — and getting them; changes that seem so necessary if we are to meet our responsibilities to the young people in our schools."

While the summer students plunge into the immediate problems of their schools, a group of 75 public high school teachers is having a full year off under the same program to pursue studies in the humanities. Some are taking courses in their own fields, others not. Some work for credit, others audit for pleasure.

Lawn Mowing May Be Revolutionized

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — A Bradenton man informed neighbors of a scheme he devised which may revolutionize the lawn mowing industry.

The happy schemer places cocktail glass holders used for lawn parties at intervals around his yard, then places an iced drink in each.

He says the cocktail stakes are placed so that as he rides around on the power mower, he is never without refreshment.

Customs Officer's Kindness Pays Off

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Kindness to newly arrived Cuban refugee children has won U.S. Customs Officer Henry Palacios official commendation and a $200 award from the Treasury Department.

Palacios, who makes a habit of keeping candy and chewing gum on hand for the little refugees he sees through customs, was cited for promoting goodwill for the Customs Service and the United States.

Institutes Bring Welcome Change

By The Associated Press

One group of high school principals and teachers will face the educational headaches this fall refreshed in spirit and recharged in enthusiasm after a summer spent delving into the humanities.

The happy breakaway from their ordinary chores comes by courtesy of the John Hay Fellows Program, which set up these summer institutes "with a view to enriching teaching and stimulating creative, imaginative contributions to American education".

Seventy public school administrators and 170 public senior high school teachers discussed philosophy, listened to concerts, brushed up on their knowledge of architecture, talked in groups and thought in private on four college campuses — Bennington, Williams, Colorado and the University of Oregon.

The dividends paid by this unusual kind of prepaid summer are enormous.

One administrator said, "The Institute had kindled in me the desire to read other modern novels, it has made me haunt secondhand book stores and it has caused me to neglect my garden, as I now choose a Sunday in an art gallery instead of with weeds and fertilizer."

Another commented, "I am pressing for changes — and getting them; changes that seem so necessary if we are to meet our responsibilities to the young people in our schools."

While the summer students plunge into the immediate problems of their schools, a group of 75 public high school teachers is having a full year off under the same program to pursue studies in the humanities. Some are taking courses in their own fields, others not. Some work for credit, others audit for pleasure.

School Fashions Work In Line With Colleges

By JACK STILLMAN

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—"They told me to find out what the colleges are looking for and put it into Shades Valley," says principal Dr. Frank A. Peake.

And that's what he attempted—and is attempting—to do.

When Shades Valley High School was built 12 years ago, Peake visited more than 100 colleges and universities before he even began organizing curriculum and hiring teachers. He still makes periodic trips to these institutions to keep up with the times.

"When I see what they are demanding," he says, "I can see we are too easy on our students."

Shades Valley was built at a cost of about a million dollars. Several additions have made it a $3 million institution. In the fashionable communities of Homewood and Mountain Brook which it serves, 90 per cent of high school graduates go to college—compared with 65 per cent nationally.

PEAKE, 56, served as principal at two other schools and is the only principal Shades Valley has ever had. He still has his first two student advisers and half the original teaching staff.

And Peake claims he still maintains the kind of a school the parents demand — even though some accuse him of making the curriculum too difficult. He says:

"Shades Valley is built upon the concern of the parents, which has fostered an exchange of ideas between the school and the institutions of higher learning.

"At other schools where I was principal, we saw perhaps one parent a week. At Shades Valley, there is a constant parade of parents — both mothers and fathers.

"We stress that our teachers should not only teach their subjects, but they should teach how to study. Each course is different — and so far the study methods." The school, with 1,800 students, has a teacher ratio of one to about every 25 students.

Yet a tour of the building is likely to leave the impression that Shades Valley is concerned with everything but scholastic ability.

Its four gymnasiums are well equipped.

A GLEAMING home economics department has six complete kitchens and a furnished four-room apartment where students practice home decorating.

An electronic classroom is used to teach languages.

Are these "frills" of education? Peake says they are not.

"They help us do a better job. We must consider the 10 per cent of our students who will not go to college. We must give them something useful that they can take with them when they leave high school."

And the electronic classroom?

"It is part of the federal program for language, science, math and guidance. It costs us nothing. If we find that it does not do what we think it will, we will take it out.

"We sometimes make mistakes. We admit it. We revise our curriculum as we think necessary."

Several years ago Shades Valley eliminated its shops because trade unions and industry were doing a better job.

The curriculum has included college freshman math for eight years. College English and college history were added two years ago, and a college-level science course and a college freshman language course are to be added this fall.

Furthermore, Peake says, there are no "snap" courses at Shades Valley.

"The thing we are trying to do is find what the capacity of each child is and push him to his limit."

Groundwork Set For College Days In First 3 Grades

The path to college is paved in the first three grades of school, says Eugene S. Wilson, admissions dean of Amherst College, so parents would do well to stay close to their children's education from the time they start school.

Last-minute coaching and drilling to meet college requirements can't possibly counteract any educational damages done to the student in his early grades, he says.

Mastery of tool subjects, reading facility and flexibility and establishment of good study habits are laid in the early dawn of a child's education, explains the dean.

Families also can help prepare their children for college by encouraging reading. "Four out of five families won't have any idea what their children are reading," says Wilson. "They often don't know where the library is, or who the librarian is. Just give her a chance, and a good librarian will stimulate and enrich a child's reading."

If reading is a family's main interest, the child will be giant steps ahead on his walk to the college gates.

Parents can help their children build a bigger vocabulary by playing all kinds of words and spelling games with them, says Wilson.

Battle Rages In Britain Over Eggheads, Dunces

LONDON (AP) — A quiet but intense battle over school segregation is building up in Britain.

The problem has nothing to do with race or color — it's just whether the eggheads should be isolated from the dunces.

First big moves in the battle have been initiated by the Socialist-controlled London County Council which decided earlier this year to eliminate that scholastic hurdle known as the 11-Plus examination.

Ever since the end of World War II, the 11-Plus has been an educational ax that split brainy children from the not-so-bright herd.

Children in British primary schools sit for this examination at around the age of 11.

Those who pass qualify for an academic education in what are known as the grammar schools. For a grammar school pupil the way lies open for college education and the top careers in the land.

The 11-Plus failures go to a secondary modern school where a humbler range of crafts are taught. These pupils generally leave school at 15 and have a tussle to raise beyond the artisan class.

—:—

THE LCC long has opposed the system in principle. It worked against it by creating a new type of school called the "comprehensive."

This combines both the grammar and secondary modern ranges of education. The difference is that an 11-Plus failure who shows later promise can be diverted to the grammar stream within the same school.

Such a comprehensive school is the nearest thing in Britain to the American high school.

As the LCC sees it, this system does away with the arbitrary decision on a child's capabilities at the age of 11.

And, since both streams are housed in the same building, it enables them to mix socially at play and meal times.

No such mixing is available in the separate schools.

This can apply even to children of the same family. And the parent whose child goes to the grammar school often acquires social superiority over his next - door neighbor whose child could only make the secondary modern.

Educationalists have complained that many children are made sacrifice to this fear of social stigma.

According to this argument, a child quite unsuited for the higher academic reaches will be harried by his parents to cram for the 11-Plus for fear that failure will bring lower stature in the neighborhood.

—:—

THE LCC now has 62 comprehensive schools in London. Fifteen of the 20 remaining grammar schools are due to be absorbed into the comprehensive system.

With this preponderance of comprehensive schools, the 11-Plus is already less of a nightmare for most London children.

The LCC has made it clear that it intends to abolish the 11-Plus altogether as soon as enough grammar schools have been merged into the comprehensive system.

Local and national politics play a large part in the issue. Broadly, Conservatives support the separate school ideal.

Their argument is that selection has to be made somewhere along the line and that the 11-Plus is the fairest method yet devised of achieving this.

One Tory politician commented of the LCC plan:

"They want the schools to be primarily social minching machines, places where all children can be jelled together in order to produce an egalitarian England."

The LCC's problem is to try and push the change through before it is itself demolished. A new national plan for local government calls for replacement of the LCC by a wider metropolitan authority which probably would be controlled by Conservatives.

But if the LCC can destroy the 11-Plus before it is itself destroyed, there is little likelihood that its successors will be able to revive the doctrine of separate schooling.

Blood Program In Beaver Gives Patients 5,000 Units

The United Funds of Beaver County said over 5,000 units of blood have been supplied by the Beaver County Red Cross Blood Center of New Brighton to county residents hospitalized in the past year.

This compares to 1,900 units supplied 12 years ago when the program first was conceived.

Blood is available to the county residents whenever and wherever needed through the blood bank of the Red Cross, an affiliated agency of the United Funds.

The whole blood is provided to both the four county hospitals and for use of county residents in hospitals outside of the area by the blood center free of charge. A nominal laboratory and administrative fee is assessed by the hospitals.

Although the entire blood program is administered by the Beaver County Red Cross Chapter, it is primarily through the volunteer efforts of the Beaver County Medical Society that the program can be operated efficiently and effectively, sponsors said.

During the past year, 21 members of the medical society provided 1,300 volunteer hours directing the medical and technical work at the blood center.

In addition, over 100 volunteer registered nurses, Gray Ladies, staff aides, nurses aides, blood aides, canteen and junior Red Cross workers provided volunteer service towards the achievement of the blood program.

The backbone is the blood bank program now operating for 64 industries and organized groups.

The blood bank, having full support of management and organized labor, provides individuals with the opportunity to donate blood at their convenience by means of mobile unit blood banks.

Individuals can then draw on their credited blood donations for future usage.

Battle Rages In Britain Over Eggheads, Dunces

LONDON (AP) — A quiet but intense battle over school segregation is building up in Britain.

The problem has nothing to do with race or color — it's just whether the eggheads should be isolated from the dunces.

First big moves in the battle have been initiated by the Socialist-controlled London County Council which decided earlier this year to eliminate that scholastic hurdle known as the 11-Plus examination.

Ever since the end of World War II, the 11-Plus has been an educational ax that split brainy children from the not-so-bright herd.

Children in British primary schools sit for this examination at around the age of 11.

Those who pass qualify for an academic education in what are known as the grammar schools. For a grammar school pupil the way lies open for college education and the top careers in the land.

The 11-Plus failures go to a secondary modern school where a humbler range of crafts are taught. These pupils generally leave school at 15 and have a tussle to raise beyond the artisan class.

—:—

THE LCC long has opposed the system in principle. It worked against it by creating a new type of school called the "comprehensive."

This combines both the grammar and secondary modern ranges of education. The difference is that an 11-Plus failure who shows later promise can be diverted to the grammar stream within the same school.

Such a comprehensive school is the nearest thing in Britain to the American high school.

As the LCC sees it, this system does away with the arbitrary decision on a child's capabilities at the age of 11.

And, since both streams are housed in the same building, it enables them to mix socially at play and meal times.

No such mixing is available in the separate schools.

This can apply even to children of the same family. And the parent whose child goes to the grammar school often acquires social superiority over his next - door neighbor whose child could only make the secondary modern.

Educationalists have complained that many children are made sacrifice to this fear of social stigma.

According to this argument, a child quite unsuited for the higher academic reaches will be harried by his parents to cram for the 11-Plus for fear that failure will bring lower stature in the neighborhood.

—:—

THE LCC now has 62 comprehensive schools in London. Fifteen of the 20 remaining grammar schools are due to be absorbed into the comprehensive system.

With this preponderance of comprehensive schools, the 11-Plus is already less of a nightmare for most London children.

The LCC has made it clear that it intends to abolish the 11-Plus altogether as soon as enough grammar schools have been merged into the comprehensive system.

Local and national politics play a large part in the issue. Broadly, Conservatives support the separate school ideal.

Their argument is that selection has to be made somewhere along the line and that the 11-Plus is the fairest method yet devised of achieving this.

One Tory politician commented of the LCC plan:

"They want the schools to be primarily social minching machines, places where all children can be jelled together in order to produce an egalitarian England."

The LCC's problem is to try and push the change through before it is itself demolished. A new national plan for local government calls for replacement of the LCC by a wider metropolitan authority which probably would be controlled by Conservatives.

But if the LCC can destroy the 11-Plus before it is itself destroyed, there is little likelihood that its successors will be able to revive the doctrine of separate schooling.

Blood Program In Beaver Gives Patients 5,000 Units

The United Funds of Beaver County said over 5,000 units of blood have been supplied by the Beaver County Red Cross Blood Center of New Brighton to county residents hospitalized in the past year.

This compares to 1,900 units supplied 12 years ago when the program first was conceived.

Blood is available to the county residents whenever and wherever needed through the blood bank of the Red Cross, an affiliated agency of the United Funds.

The whole blood is provided to both the four county hospitals and for use of county residents in hospitals outside of the area by the blood center free of charge. A nominal laboratory and administrative fee is assessed by the hospitals.

Although the entire blood program is administered by the Beaver County Red Cross Chapter, it is primarily through the volunteer efforts of the Beaver County Medical Society that the program can be operated efficiently and effectively, sponsors said.

During the past year, 21 members of the medical society provided 1,300 volunteer hours directing the medical and technical work at the blood center.

In addition, over 100 volunteer registered nurses, Gray Ladies, staff aides, nurses aides, blood aides, canteen and junior Red Cross workers provided volunteer service towards the achievement of the blood program.

The backbone is the blood bank program now operating for 64 industries and organized groups.

The blood bank, having full support of management and organized labor, provides individuals with the opportunity to donate blood at their convenience by means of mobile unit blood banks.

Individuals can then draw on their credited blood donations for future usage.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3 CARDS OF THANKS

THOMAS ROBERT ANDERSON. We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, and beautiful floral offerings received from our kind friends and neighbors during our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved son. We especially thank the Rev. James Hunton.
Mother and Sisters.

WE wish to express our heartfelt thanks and deep appreciation to our relatives, friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy shown us during the recent loss of our beloved husband and father, Sheldon Clendenning. Special thanks to all our friends and neighbors for all their kind deeds and words of comfort, those who sent flowers, food, cards, those who participated in the military services, the Clark Funeral Home, Rev. Ralph Cope, Rev. Charles Daily, and the members of Bray's Chapel, Fosterville Methodist, First Methodist of Toronto, and the Christian Church of New Somerset.
The Sheldon Clendenning Family, wife and children.

Chrysler Corporation Announces A Revelation In The Auto Industry

5 YEAR - 50,000 WARRANTY

On all 1963 Models. The most important guarantee advance in automobile history — Proving again the clear cut superiority of Chrysler engineering!

BUT:
We are stocked with 30 1962 cars including (2) Imperials, (7) Chryslers (11) Valiants and (10) Plymouths. (2) are demonstrators and (3) are officials cars. (These cars carry only a one wear —12,000-mile warranty, the same as our competition) However our 1962 cars will be identical (mechanically) to the 1963 models.

THEREFORE:
We must sell our entire 1962 stock at a great sacrifice. Every car is numbered and the equipment itemized.

SAVE UP TO $1,700.00
You can reserve the car of your choice by phone for 12 hours. Out of town may call collect!

TRADES ACCEPTED AT FULL CASH VALUE. A MINIMUM OF $50 DOWN IS REQUIRED. 37½ MONTHS TO PAY. NO PAYMENTS TILL OCTOBER. BANK RATE FINANCING.

We honestly believe that the values listed on this page cannot be duplicated anywhere. We invite your comparison.

Junior Editors Quiz on BONES

QUESTION: How do bones grow?

★ ★ ★

ANSWER: We are very apt to think of bones as just hard, stick-like things. They don't seem to be alive, so it's natural to wonder how it is that they manage to get bigger and keep pace with other parts of the body. The mystery is solved when we understand that bones are not dead things but are made of living tissue. The hard part is on the outside. Inside is spongy tissue and there is a long canal filled with marrow, which helps to manufacture blood corpuscles for the body. When you realize that bones are connected with the blood stream and are part of the whole life of the body it is easy to think of them growing as other parts of the body do by the continual addition of new cells, which are the minute building blocks of the body. So Jack's "humerus" or arm bone is constantly growing while he is young. At the rounded end of the bone is a plate of "cartilage", a soft material. This continually widens and grows away from the center part, — making it longer. As it grows, the cartilage secretes the hard substance which turns into bone.

★ ★ ★

FOR YOU TO DO: Knowing that a bone is living tissue will help you understand how bones will knit together again after being broken. But we all should know exactly what and what not to do in the case of broken bones. Check a Boy Scout or Girl Scout Handbook for this information.

College Means Long Study Week

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Those 25-hour or 30-hour or even 40-hour work weeks are not for today's college student.

A staggering work week of 60 or 70 hours is suggested by Dr. Frank Oppenheimer, noted physicist at the University of Colorado, as "a general basis for doing merely acceptable work in college.

"Students have no notion how much work they need to do," Oppenheimer said.

For young people approaching college, Oppenheimer proposes this packaged work week for the average student carrying a classroom work load of 15 hours per week.

Sixty hours of classroom and studying, 10 hours spent in reading not required by classes, 25 hours devoted to eating and talking and 56 hours sleeping.

Such a routine would leave 17 hours for athletics, recreation or other diversion.

Should a student want to regulate his college life on a daily basis, here's Oppenheimer's suggestion:

Monday through Friday — four hours in class, including laboratory work and quiz sessions, seven hours devoted to study, 90 minutes to reading, three and a half hours to eating and talking and eight hours to sleep.

Saturday — one hour reading, four hours eating and talking, eight hours sleeping and 11 hours uncommitted.

Sunday — one hour and a half reading, three hours and a half eating and talking, five hours studying, eight hours sleeping and six hours uncommitted.

"This seems quite reasonable," Oppenheimer said in outlining his proposals.

"No one knows exactly how hard one must work to be a good, or even fair, college student. But it certainly has to be at least this hard. Scientific students and others in pursuit of highly specialized goals go much harder than this."

Florida's State Schools To Try Trimester Setup

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — All four of Florida's state universities are inaugurating year-round operations under the trimester system this fall.

It is the start of a program which likely will spread through the state's entire educational system from kindergarten to the graduate school in the next few years.

While various schools have tried the trimester system before, Florida is the first state to put its entire university system under the plan. It divided the school year into three trimesters lasting 11 months instead of two semesters running nine months.

Bulging enrollments in this fast-growing state and the desire for greater utilization of classrooms built up pressures for year-round operations.

Studies have been under way several years but the state legislature hastened the innovation by making extra pay for faculties dependent on inauguration of a year-round system.

Administrators at one of the universities, Florida State, say academic pressures are certain to be heavier on students.

They will attend classes which will be seven minutes longer that the 48-minute classes now held. And the class work which has occupied 16 weeks in the semester will be crowded into 14 weeks in the tri-mester. Another week each trimester will be provided for exams.

This means an estimated 20 per cent increase in the amount of out-of-class work, these administrators say. And it will mean that extracurricular activities which have been spread through the week will now be crowded into weekends.

Freshmen entering a state university this fall will have the opportunity to get a bachelor's degree in two and two-thirds years instead of the normal four — provided they attend all sessions.

But Florida State's dean of students, R. R. Oglesby, estimates that only 20 per cent will go to school all three trimesters.

Most are expected to attend two or possibly two and a half. The third trimester, which runs from April 29 through Aug. 10, will be split, primarily so that school teachers can attend for graduate study during the second half.

The Board of Control which supervises the university system has found the switchover a painful administrative process, particularly the matter of adjusting faculty pay. The board also says air conditioning will be a must in this warm climate and steps are being taken to air condition classrooms and dormitories.

Another problem has been setting up the third trimester. University presidents expect enrollment to drop considerably because many students have to work to finance their college educations. However, the presidents said students living in south Florida might stay out the second trimester, Jan. 7 through April 19, because jobs are plentiful in winter resort areas then.

Advocates of the trimester system say it won't work perfectly until the entire state educational system has been placed under it and all educational gears are in mesh.

2,000-Year Old Village Discovered

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis. (AP)— A tip by a highway surveyor has led to the discovery of ruins of a 2,000-year old Hopewell Indian village on a farm near this southwestern Wisconsin community.

Frank Homes of nearby Lancaster was surveying the relocation of a highway when he found many arrowheads and human teeth. He told the Wisconsin Historical Society, which sent archaeologists to the site.

Diggings indicated that the village contained one larger central house, with 12 small houses surrounding it. Some were connected, indicating that the village may have been a fortification.

The Hopewells roamed a wide area of the upper Midwest from 500 B. C. to about 500 A. D.

JPs Stay Slender

TORRINGTON, Wyo. (AP) — Justice of Peace Lee Hastings has his own special reason for seeking re-election to a third term. He explained "My sole purpose for running is that I'm on a strict diet and the salary of the office will keep me there."

They're Never Too Young For Process Of Learning

By The Associated Press

He's not old enough to write his name. Reading is way beyond him. But long before he acquires these skills, he may be a whiz in the world of ideas.

You may find this out by judicious use of the word "why."

Pre-schoolers aren't inhibited by facts and traditional ways of thinking, says Mrs. Charlotte B. Winsor, who teaches teachers at the Bank Street College of Education in New York.

But parents often underestimate the ability of their youngsters to reason. Because they have no book learning, parents figure they can't think.

This cart-before-the-horse approach should be reversed, she feels. "Young children can be given the foundations of knowledge, and fill in with the facts later. But it takes a sensitive ear to recognize that a child is uttering a profound truth."

She cites the comment of a 5-year-old who had discovered a map of the United States: "It's so hard to imagine the world never ends."

This is the moment to take advantage of the child's awareness with a follow-through conversation. She suggests finding places on the map whose names he's heard, explaining that this is only the map of his country, and enlarging on his awareness of space.

This way, he's learning geography long before he can read or draw maps.

While various schools have tried the trimester system before, Florida is the first state to put its entire university system under the plan. It divided the school year into three trimesters lasting 11 months instead of two semesters running nine months.

Bulging enrollments in this fast-growing state and the desire for greater utilization of classrooms built up pressures for year-round operations.

Studies have been under way several years but the state legislature hastened the innovation by making extra pay for faculties dependent on inauguration of a year-round system.

Administrators at one of the universities, Florida State, say academic pressures are certain to be heavier on students.

They will attend classes which will be seven minutes longer that the 48-minute classes now held. And the class work which has occupied 16 weeks in the semester will be crowded into 14 weeks in the tri-mester. Another week each trimester will be provided for exams.

This means an estimated 20 per cent increase in the amount of out-of-class work, these administrators say. And it will mean that extracurricular activities which have been spread through the week will now be crowded into weekends.

Freshmen entering a state university this fall will have the opportunity to get a bachelor's degree in two and two-thirds years instead of the normal four — provided they attend all sessions.

But Florida State's dean of students, R. R. Oglesby, estimates that only 20 per cent will go to school all three trimesters.

Most are expected to attend two or possibly two and a half. The third trimester, which runs from April 29 through Aug. 10, will be split, primarily so that school teachers can attend for graduate study during the second half.

The Board of Control which supervises the university system has found the switchover a painful administrative process, particularly the matter of adjusting faculty pay. The board also says air conditioning will be a must in this warm climate and steps are being taken to air condition classrooms and dormitories.

Another problem has been setting up the third trimester. University presidents expect enrollment to drop considerably because many students have to work to finance their college educations. However, the presidents said students living in south Florida might stay out the second trimester, Jan. 7 through April 19, because jobs are plentiful in winter resort areas then.

Advocates of the trimester system say it won't work perfectly until the entire state educational system has been placed under it and all educational gears are in mesh.

2,000-Year Old Village Discovered

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis. (AP) — A tip by a highway surveyor has led to the discovery of ruins of a 2,000-year old Hopewell Indian village on a farm near this southwestern Wisconsin community.

Frank Homes of nearby Lancaster was surveying the relocation of a highway when he found many arrowheads and human teeth. He told the Wisconsin Historical Society, which sent archaeologists to the site.

Diggings indicated that the village contained one larger central house, with 12 small houses surrounding it. Some were connected, indicating that the village may have been a fortification.

The Hopewells roamed a wide area of the upper Midwest from 500 B. C. to about 500 A. D.

JPs Stay Slender

TORRINGTON, Wyo. (AP) — Justice of Peace Lee Hastings has his own special reason for seeking re-election to a third term. He explained "My sole purpose for running is that I'm on a strict diet and the salary of the office will keep me there."

They're Never Too Young For Process Of Learning

By The Associated Press

He's not old enough to write his name. Reading is way beyond him. But long before he acquires these skills, he may be a whiz in the world of ideas.

You may find this out by judicious use of the word "why."

Pre-schoolers aren't inhibited by facts and traditional ways of thinking, says Mrs. Charlotte B. Winsor, who teaches teachers at the Bank Street College of Education in New York.

But parents often underestimate the ability of their youngsters to reason. Because they have no book learning, parents figure they can't think.

This cart-before-the-horse approach should be reversed, she feels. "Young children can be given the foundations of knowledge, and fill in with the facts later. But it takes a sensitive ear to recognize that a child is uttering a profound truth."

She cites the comment of a 5-year-old who had discovered a map of the United States: "It's so hard to imagine the world never ends."

This is the moment to take advantage of the child's awareness with a follow-through conversation. She suggests finding places on the map whose names he's heard, explaining that this is only the map of his country, and enlarging on his awareness of space.

This way, he's learning geography long before he can read or draw maps.
